800 Soviet Aerial Raiders Blast Finnish Cities, Trains

DEFENSE SMASHES SWARM OF SLEDS AS REDS TRY COUP

Russians Report Capture of Koivisto, Mannerheim
Anchor. But Finns
Deny It Has Fallen.

HELSINKI, Feb. 20.—(AP)
Swarms of Soviet Russian bombers, about 800 according to latest estimates, swept over much of Finland in a series of raids today and tonight.

There were seven air raid alarms in Helsinki, the last from 11:30 p. m. (3:30 p. m.
Atlanta time), to midnight, and from four to eight in nearly every community across the southern part of the nation.

Two trains were reported bombed and machine-gunned, one during the day and one tonight.

Two persons were wounded, including the engineer of one train en route to Turku, where the alarms lasted into the night after three bombings yesterday.

Raiders Downed.
Five of the Red raiders were reported shot down at Riihimäki and one at Haenkyro. The latter is the birthplace of Frans Sillanpää, Finnish novelist who won the 1939 Nobel prize for literature.

In Moscow the Russian army today reported that troops had occupied both the town and fortress of Koivisto, western anchor citadel of the Mannerheim line, and had "cleared" them of the enemy.

The communists said large "troops" were captured in the mopping up of Koivisto. The Russians also claimed 47 enemy airplanes were brought down in air battles.

Fall Denied.
(Authoritative Finnish
sources, however, denied Koiv-isto had fallen, the United Press reported.)

The Finns were reported tonight to have scattered a Soviet swarm of strange, bug-like "air motor slees" which swarmed across the ice of Lake Ladoga in an attempt to skirt stubborn land fortifications in a surprise coup.

At least 200 Russians were killed and the entire detachment dispersed, the Finns said, after the Russians, "in great force," had set out from the Taipale area in a fleet of bobsleds, powered by propellers.

Between the Gulf of Finland and Lake Muel, spearhead of the 30-day Red army drive on the half-ruined city of Viipuri, an official Finnish communiqué said with military terseness: "Enemy attacks continued . . . the attacks were repulsed."

Northeast of Lake Ladoga, more than 50 miles across the lake from the isthmus fighting, the Finns declared there was
"continued cleaning up on bases taken from the enemy" where destruction of Russia's 18th army division was reported yesterday.

Vinson Holds Trade Pacts Vital to Georgia's Economy

Georgia Representative Points to State's Record of Dwindling Exports Under Smoot-Hawley Tariff as Reason for Need of Reciprocal Agreements.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.
Special Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Georgia needs the Roosevelt-Hull reciprocal trade agreements, Representative Carl Vinson, dean of the state's congressional delegation, told the house today, because Georgia needs foreign markets for her cotton, her textile manufacturers, her tobacco, turpentine, rosin, and her lumber and wood products.

Mr. Vinson urged his colleagues to vote for extension of the trade agreements act which expires June 12 because of the benefits it has brought to America's economy and of the part it is bound to play in bringing about a world peace "that will endure."

During a half hour's speech on the floor of the lower chamber, he emphasized particularly what the 18 agreements already negotiated with foreign powers meant to agriculture in Georgia. Explaining that agriculture is of paramount importance in the state, he pointed out that cotton raising alone gives employment to almost 1,000,000 persons and the cotton textile industry to another 90,000 persons.

"In 11 agreements, Mr. Vinson said, 'concessions have been obtained by this country on cotton manufactures. In the list of products benefited are yarns, bags, cotton cloth of many types, hosiery, knit goods, shirts, collars, men's clothing and women's dresses. Georgia has these to sell.'

He then went on to tell how Georgia growers and manufacturers of tobacco have a direct interest in the concessions obtained in 11 agreements for tobacco and its manufacturers.

"For tobacco leaf," he declared, "two countries reduced the duty, four bound the existing duties against increase and one guaranteed the amount of its annual purchase. For cigars four countries reduced the duties and four bound them against increase. Two countries reduced the duties on smoking and chewing tobacco."

Relating how Georgia wood manufacturing industries gave employment to more than 15,000 wage earners, he showed that about half of the United States production of turpentine and rosin comes from Georgia.

It took the Gauci brothers 11 years to construct the model, and a full week to assemble it in Atlanta. On display for a limited time, admission prices are 25 cents for adults and 15 cents for children, the proceeds being devoted to charity.

LONG IS BELIEVED BEATEN BY JONES

Louisiana Machine Trails
by 8,000 Votes as Opposition Gains Mount.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Sam Houston Jones, who pledged himself to destroy the old Huey P. Long political machine in Louisiana, at midnight tonight appeared on the basis of incomplete and unofficial returns to have defeated Governor Earl K. Long in the bitter Democratic gubernatorial state primary.

With approximately 150,000 of 500,000 votes yet to be counted most of these in country parishes (counties) where Jones showed his greatest strength, the 42-year-old Lake Charles attorney was leading Long, 182,390 votes to 174,536, and his lead was slowly mounting.

Jones Overtakes Long.
He had come from behind to overcome an early lead of about 15,000 votes given Long in the machine-controlled New Orleans, where the vote was almost complete at midnight.

The vote reported was from 1,159 of the state's 1,703 precincts, and represented a total vote of 356,000. It had been anticipated approximately a half-million votes would be cast.

Jones has campaigned on a platform calling for purging the state of political "crooks" and repeal of the "dictator" laws under which the late Huey P. Long established his one-man control of the state. Governor Long, his brother, is seeking to perpetuate this organization.

Had Early Lead.
Long took an early lead on returns from New Orleans, but this was soon whittled down by reports from the country parishes.

All the state's 3,500 national guardsmen were held in readiness to quell any possible disturbances during the balloting.

New Orleans police reported just as the polls closed at 7 p. m. that 60 persons had been arrested during the day at voting places, "mostly on charges of being drunk and a few for fighting and disturbing the peace."

JURY INDICTS 12 IN RENEWED DRIVE ON LOTTERY HERE

'This Just Beginning,'
Boykin Declares, Adding That Other Indictments
Have Been Drawn Up.

The Fulton county grand jury yesterday "cracked down" on the operation of the "bug" here with indictments against 12 persons—two white women and 10 Negroes. Bond in each case was fixed at $1,000.

The indictments, the first returned by the present jury, marked the resumption of an investigation of lottery in Atlanta and Fulton county, Solicitor Boykin said.

"These true bills are just the beginning," Boykin asserted. "Other indictments have been drawn and will be submitted just as soon as all of the evidence has been gathered and placed before the grand jury."

Those indicted included Mrs. Ellna Cox, alias Wright, and Mrs. Sarah Richman, and the following Negroes:

Robert Bennett, 26; Leonard Byron, 21; Eula Floyd, 40; Martha Hall, 32; Lula Jones, 23; Agnes Lockhart, 27; Albert Newton, Elizabeth Parker; Mattie Ward, 27, and Annie Williams, 17.

Conviction on the charge of lottery, a misdemeanor, carries a maximum of 12 months and a $1,000 fine.

As the grand jury and the special city-county "bug" squad turned the heat on lottery operations here, city police heard reports that lottery operators were offering a $250 reward for the names of citizens furnishing police with information about the "bug."

Aimed at Announcement.
This, it was said, was aimed at an announcement by Solicitor Boykin in which he offered $50 reward for information leading to the seizure of a lottery headquarters; $10 for the arrest of a writer or pickup man, and $5 for verified lists of habitual players.

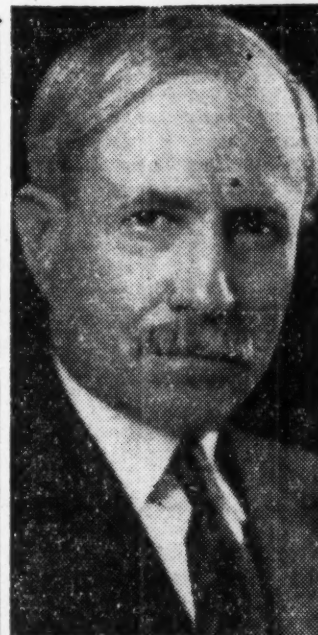

The threat of reprisal brought from Mayor Hartsfield a statement that he had furnished several tips to police on pickup stations and lottery operations and that anyone who could collect from the operators on this was welcome to do so.

Only one lottery arrest was made by police yesterday. The suspect was booked as Robert Lane, 35, Negro, of 289 Piedmont avenue.

However, the chase of a suspected lottery car resulted in the arrest of two youths on charges of suspicion and slight injury to three persons, police reported.

Patrolman A. L. Rhodes said he was chasing the car along Spring

NO SHOWDOWN YET IN HIGHWAY FIGHT

Week's Delay Expected
While Miller Puts Up a $3,000 Federal Bond.

A delay of at least a week on a showdown between Governor Rivers and the federal court in the controversy between Rivers and W. L. Miller, ousted chairman of the State Highway Board, was in prospect yesterday.

The formal order, an injunction from Judge Bascom Deaver, of the federal court at Macon, itself was delayed until Miller's attorneys post bond for $3,000 required in all federal injunction suits.

Rivers Still Defiant.

Governor Rivers meanwhile continued to let it be known that he will ignore Judge Deaver's order and that the national guard will not permit Miller's return to the highway department. Refusal of state authorities to comply with the Deaver order is expected to be followed by a plea from Miller's attorneys for a contempt of court citation which will bring the showdown.

Governor Rivers has not given any indication as to his course when and if a citation is issued. Previously he has ignored the federal court save for a letter he sent Judge Deaver last week.

Miller was at the capitol yesterday listening to arguments before the supreme court on contempt cases growing out of his state court litigation. He said his attorneys were preparing the $3,000 bond for presentation to Judge Deaver at Macon today.

The injunction order then is to be turned over to Marshal Charles H. Cox here for service, probably Friday or Saturday, inasmuch as tomorrow is a legal holiday when both the federal building and the capitol will be closed.

Sources close to the Governor which on Monday said he planned to surround himself with national guardsmen to prevent service of any court order yesterday, said the Governor now has no such intention.

FOUR DIRECTORS ELECTED AT RICH'S

Store Continues Policy of Advancing Employees to Important Positions.

Four divisional managers, including one woman, were elected yesterday as directors of Rich's, Inc.

They were Miss Annie May Gallagher, expert in women's fashions; Elmer H. Etling, merchandise director; Joseph F. Asher, men's furnishings director, and Louis C. Long, expert in household furnishings, electrical supplies and musical instruments as well as basement merchandise manager.

Announcement of the appointments was made by Walter H. Rich, president, following a stockholders' meeting. Other directors are the president, Frank H. Neely, Richard H. Rich, Oscar R. Strauss Jr., James P. Flynn, Ben R. Gordon, William T. Rich and Marion Smith.

Officers Elected.

Officers elected at a meeting of the directors included Neely as vice president and secretary, Richard Rich as vice president, Strauss as vice president and Gordon as treasurer.

Pointing to the store's policy of advancing employees, an announcement of the new directors said:

"Mr. Etling's election is a tribute to his talent in pleasing feminine tastes, as he is merchandise director of linens, beddings, lace, art needle work supplies, notions and the Forsyth street annex of Rich's, Inc. He came to Atlanta to take over these departments some 10 years ago after splendid experience in the middle west, and the stockholders have shown by this election that the original appointment by the officers was well placed."

Asher Ability Praised.

"Since a department store includes men's furnishings and clothing, Mr. Asher's election is recognition of his ability and knowledge in the field of men's apparel. He is divisional manager of all departments in the store handling men's furnishings, as well as luggage, stationery and candy."

"Mr. Long, coming to Rich's as merchandise manager of the basement, is also manager of the sixth floor departments of household furnishings, musical instruments, and electrical supplies. His knowledge and business acumen have proved themselves in the successful promotion of these important departments."

"The election of Miss Gallagher will be a matter of intense interest to the women of the state who hold her in deep affection, and whose advice is constantly sought by discriminating women. Her dictum is accepted because of her knowledge of her integrity—integrity she has always maintained in quality, price, style and suitability to her client of the garment she displays."

SHARP CRITICISM OF WORK IS MADE BY JURY PROBERS

Subcommittee Urges
That Judge Humphries
Direct Selection of Chief Officer, His Assistants.

Severe criticism of Fulton county's adult probation office as being chiefly a collection agency of alimony, funds for abandoned children and installment-plan fines, with little or no interest in genuine probation activity, was contained in a special grand jury subcommittee report made public yesterday.

It urged reorganization of the method of appointing the chief probation officer and seven assistants by putting it under the personal direction of Judge John D. Humphries, and recommended that the number of assistants be increased to nine if the plan were carefully followed.

Striking Failure.

George Allen Maddox is in charge of the office.

"Inquiry disclosed," said the report, "that very little probation field work, such as visiting the homes of probationers and making helpful effort to restore them to respectable and law-abiding citizens, is carried on."

The result was declared to be "a striking failure to salvage human beings from a life of crime and restore them to respectable and self-respecting citizenship."

Urged Trained Workers.

Signed by F. S. McGaughey, chairman of the subcommittee, the document suggested specifically:

(1) That Judge Humphries examine into "qualifications and efficiency of existing personnel" and make such changes as may seem necessary to improve the "quality and quantity of real probation work."

(2) That the number of assistants be increased to nine, provided "all new employees . . . be persons having had adequate previous training and experience in real probation work (as distinguished from money-collecting) and not otherwise."

(3) That no general pay increases be granted, each being based on individual efficiency and merit.

Interference Opposed.

(4) That the appointments made by Judge Humphries or possibly with the aid of one other judge, be subject to no interference from any other county department."

Salient extracts from the report follow:

"We have made an investigation of the adult probation office of Fulton county, and find that this comprises a chief probation officer and seven assistants, with a total monthly pay roll of $1,297.50. The judges informed us that they were considering increases of salaries of not over 15 per cent. A 15 per cent increase would raise the monthly pay roll to $1,492.12, or nearly $18,000 a year."

"The bulk of the work of the office is the collection of alimony, money due for the support of abandoned children, fines payable on the installment plan, and the like. The report of the office, for the year ended September 30, 1939, shows total collections for the year of over $90,000, of which approximately $82,000 was for the support of abandoned children. The average monthly pay roll of the office is $1,297.50."

Underwood Say: Pose as G-Man. End Up Jail-Bird

If Judge E. Marvin Underwood were Confucius, yesterday he might have pronounced a sentence thus:

"Hay, Hay, a year and a day. He who pose as G-man soon wind up jailbird."

Harold Henry Hay, a very dashing young man, got the year and a day for impersonating a G-man, and a similar sentence for posing as Marietta as a captain in the United States army air corps. Judge Underwood, in federal district court, ordered the sentences to run concurrently and recommended that Hay be sent to Chillicothe to serve the time.

"Captain" Hay was said to have talked his way into the highest society of Marietta and defrauded several citizens of small amounts of money. Previously, he had done the same thing in Newman by posing as a FBI agent. He pleaded guilty.

PERMIT FOR PIPE LINE FAILS IN CHATTANOOGA

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Feb. 20.—(AP)—The city commission defeated today an ordinance which would permit the Gulf Refining Company to construct a pipe line through a section of the city.

The proposed line would extend from Port St. Joe, Fla., through Georgia to a point on the Tennessee river near the city from which fuel would be transported on barges. The five-man commission divided on the question, two voting affirmatively and two negatively. The ordinance failed for lack of a majority vote.

SECURITY IS URGED FOR DISABLED VETS

D. A. V. Head Says South Owe Debt to World War Soldiers.

Louis J. Murphy, of South Bend, Ind., who, as national commander of the Disabled American Veterans, says his organization "constitutes the guinea pigs of the first World War," was entertained here last night by the two Atlanta posts.

Making a southern tour to "re-awaken the south to its responsibility in rehabilitation work for disabled veterans," Murphy said his group of nearly 50,000 permanently injured soldiers and sailors "would fight to the end to keep their sons from being guinea pigs in this war."

The commander, stocky and sturdy, was a second lieutenant and twice wounded in the five major battles of the first World War. Elected at the Boston convention last year, he ran on a platform which would develop rehabilitation work in the south.

"In the nation," he said, "there are 340,000 veterans receiving compensation, to say nothing of widows and dependents. Those who are disabled, if possible should be given some place in the able world. The south is falling behind in her job."

At a banquet last night were Commanders E. P. James, of the Betty Harrison Jones post, and Kenneth Murrell, of the Mort T. Nichols post, D. A. V., of Atlanta. Toastmaster was Frank Fling, former state commander.

GIRL LOCKED OUT IN FREEZING COLD

Crippled, Weighing 75 Pounds, She Stood Barefooted in Snow.

SOMERSET, Pa., Feb. 20.—(AP) A 22-year-old, 75-pound crippled girl, whose ears, feet and right hand were frozen, was found locked out of her home in the near-by hamlet of Quereek, Probation Officer A. D. Shaffer reported today.

The officer, called by a neighbor, said the black-haired, dark-eyed girl, Ada Paugh, was barefoot and wore only a flimsy black dress—still wet from being washed—at the time he and a constable reached the home of her cousin with whom she lived.

He reported the girl, whose left hand has been paralyzed and useless since childhood, told him she had soiled the dress while she was ill and had been sent to an outbuilding to wash it. Locked out, she stood in the foot-deep snow, or crouched in the outbuilding until the officers came.

She displayed black and blue bruises on her back and claimed she had been beaten. District Attorney A. M. Matthews said aggravated assault and battery charges would be placed against the cousin or his wife, or both, as soon as an investigation was completed.

Music Club Audience Is Delighted By 'Pinch-Hitter' Jan Smetlerlin

By MOZELLE HORTON YOUNG.

The theory that every cloud has a silver lining was given definite proof again last night, for disappointment of the membership of the Atlanta Music Club, first over the cancellation of Myra Hess' American tour, and second, over news Monday that Serkin had canceled his date because of illness, turned into rejoicing when they heard Jan Smetlerlin, Polish pianist, who came to "pinch-hit" for Serkin.

Most of the crowd which filled to capacity the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's Club had never heard Smetlerlin.

CHANGES WEIGHED FOR TOBACCO LAW

Congressmen Seek To Ease War-Caused Market Condition.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Members of congress from flour-cured tobacco-growing states of the south today studied amendments to the federal tobacco marketing act designed to cushion the setback given the commodity by the European war.

With export sales at a virtual standstill, the southerners considered the possibility of placing marketing control quotas on a three-year instead of a one-year basis as at present.

Another revision proposed at a meeting, called by Representative Cooley, Democrat, North Carolina, would eliminate a section in the law prohibiting the agriculture secretary from establishing marketing quotas at a level less than 75 per cent of a farmer's 1937 production.

A third amendment would exempt from consideration in establishing marketing quotas any tobacco stored in this country which "would have been exported had it not been for war or other unusual conditions of a temporary nature."

Representatives from Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and officials of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration attended the meeting.

SOUTHERN DAIRIES PLANS ADVERTISING

Proposals for 1940 Include Use of Characters From 'Pinocchio.'

Advertising and sales plans for 1940 were discussed yesterday at a meeting of Southern Dairies managers and salesmen from the Atlanta, Rome and Charlotte, N. C., plants. G. L. Smith, general sales manager, presided.

Sales plans for 1940 will include the use of fanciful characters from Walt Disney's picture, "Pinocchio," it was decided at the meeting. In the past, use of Walt Disney characters has been of great value in the sale of Southern Dairies ice cream products, Mr. Smith reported.

A large newspaper advertising campaign to sell specific products will also be used this year, he reported. Radio advertising will include a half-hour Rudy Vallee broadcast, beginning March 7, under sponsorship of Southern Dairies and the Sealtest System of Laboratory protection.

Visitors from the general offices in Washington who attended the meeting included President E. J. Mather, Howard Yaw, advertising director, and James Cates, assistant to Sales Manager Smith.

The firm's employees were guests last night at a dinner at which President Mather was host.

Speaking on the topic "If You Have a Job You Are in Business," Mr. Mather reported a successful 1939 business year for Southern Dairies.

An amazing business increase in the firm's frozen foods department has been noted during the past three years, he said.

TURKEY TO RESIST BLOW AT BALKANS, HER PRESS WARNS

'Our Country Will Not Wait With Folded Arms,' Newspaper Declares, Aiming at Germany.

ANKARA, Feb. 20.—(P)—In the midst of new military preparations by the government, the Turkish press declared flatly tonight that any attack against the Balkans would bring Turkey into the European war.

"Turkey will enter the war the day a foreign power marches into the Balkans," the newspaper Yeni Sabah of Istanbul warned.

The supreme war council opened a week's emergency session to study plans for co-ordinating Turkey's armed forces with the huge reservoir of manpower being assembled in the Near East by her French and British allies.

Significantly, it was announced that President Ismet Inonu soon would tour Thrace, frontier region in which Turkey is rushing new fortifications to oppose a possible thrust at the vital Dardanelles.

Plans were announced also for spending $15,000,000 of the recently granted British-French loan for rapid construction of a port at Eregli, on the Black sea. At present Turkey is without a Black sea harbor adequate as a base for naval operations.

"If Germany attacks the Balkans she will find us facing her on the side of the Allies because such aggression would directly menace us."

"To reach Istanbul it is necessary to cross the Balkans. Our country will not wait her turn with folded arms while the Balkans are crushed. That is one mistake we shall not make."

It was understood that British and French military missions charged with co-ordinating British-French-Turkish forces would participate in the war council meetings, which find Turkey already on a virtual war footing.

War and Gossip Can Be Mighty as the Sub

A FEW CARELESS WORDS MAY END IN THIS—

Many lives were lost in the last war through careless talk. Be on your guard! Don't discuss movements of ships or troops.

A few careless words, Britain warns her civilians, can do as much damage as many death-laden submarines. Here is a British artist's presentation of the tragedy that may result from careless talk.

By thousands of such posters, the government warns that a few words about ship movements picked up in conversation may furnish a tip that will send English sailors to their doom.

Swedish Demands Growing For Military Aid To Finland

Bloc Banded Together To Urge Active Help for Finns Sends Strong Plea to Premier Hansson for Assistance of Transcendent Vigor.

STOCKHOLM, Feb. 20.—(P)—Sweden banded together in a movement for active aid for Finland heightened tonight the political upheaval which has drawn even aged and esteemed King Gustaf into a controversy over his government's refusal to intervene with troops against Soviet Russia.

In general politicians insisted an acute political crisis had been averted, largely by the King's own declaration in support of nonintervention in Finland. But, although some of the leaders of the so-called Finnish-aid "activists" said they could not press for a decision or intervention, it was questionable whether the activists as a whole would abandon their drive for direct military help.

Strong Plea. Today they sent a strong plea to Premier Per Albin Hansson for aid to Finland of transcendent vigor. Indicative of the extent to which even the King has become involved in the issue, the chief editor of the Norwegian Tidens Tegn, writing from Stockholm, urged that Swedish military aid be pressed for a decision or intervention, "a sort of coup d'etat," which would lead to King Gustaf's abdication and the accession of the Crown Prince.

In Swedish political circles this theory was generally ridiculed.

Vigorous Aid. The "activists' resolution today was made in the name of "the northern freedom conference." Although it did not specifically ask for direct military intervention in Finland, it urged that Sweden send aid "so vigorously that any other help is unnecessary."

"Finland's cause is ours," the resolution said. "The Finnish front must be held and helped by Swedish assistance. Intervention from states outside the north would threaten to make our country a war theater."

The activists also appealed to Swedish youth to "fill the gaps in the Finnish army," declaring "the deciding hour has come!"

Nazis Bomb Ship Lanes. (Picture on Page 22.) LONDON, Feb. 20.—(P)—Germany's big black bombers blasted again today at the ship lanes up and down the British east coast, bringing the banshee wail of air-raid sirens and the metallic cough of anti-aircraft fire to London itself.

DNB, the official German news agency, reported in Berlin that two British mine-layers and one armed merchant ship were sunk by the raiders, who returned home safely.

London's sirens screamed early in the evening. Anti-aircraft fire was heard in the outskirts.

Oslo Attacked By Chamberlain. By EDWIN STOUT. LONDON, Feb. 20.—(P)—Prime Minister Chamberlain today accused worried Norway of "complete indifference" to her obligations as a neutral in her failure to free 299 British prisoners from the German vessel Altmak.

Using a cheering house of commons for a sounding board, Chamberlain said that Britain could "in no circumstances accept" the Oslo view that the Altmak had a right to transport prisoners through Norwegian territorial waters. He defended the British navy's raid into Norwegian waters, in which the destroyer Cosack rescued the prisoners, terming the action "a very gallant affair."

French Expect 'Real War.' WITH THE FRENCH AIR ARMY AT THE FRONT, Feb. 20.—(P)—French fliers expect "real war" to start on the western front as soon as the weather clears, with a mass German air attack on all French air bases.

This theory is not official, but it is widely held among the flying rank and file. It apparently has some official support, however, for all air bases have been strengthened their ground defenses. Should such German air attacks be successful, the French fliers believe Hitler then will start the long-awaited totalitarian war.

Finland To Get $300,000 Fund. NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(P)—Major General John R. O'Ryan, national chairman of the Fighting Funds for Finland, Inc., said tonight $300,000 collected by the organization for military defense of Finland would be turned over tomorrow to the Finnish minister at Washington.

At the STATE CAPITOL. Six youths from Wadley, Ga., who want to become "men with wings," turned up in the Governor's office yesterday. They had a letter introducing them and explaining that they wanted to enter the flying school at Pensacola, Fla. The boys were Ray T. Tanner, Lewis Anglin, Charles England, Gerald Weeks, Ray Cox and Russell Price. Downing Musgrove, the Governor's executive secretary, directed them to the proper authorities.

John Spivey, president of the Georgia senate, and George W. Bailey, of Jefferson, were among the visitors to the capitol yesterday.

Senator Paul Lindsay, of DeKalb county, was roaming the capitol halls yesterday. He said he wasn't on any particular business, but dropped a remark or two about

WOULD END BUYING OF FOREIGN SILVER

Federal Reserve Advisory Council Calls for Congressional Action.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(UP)—The advisory council of the Federal Reserve System tonight asked congress to end immediately treasury purchases of foreign silver.

At its annual meeting today, it adopted a resolution for transmission to the senate banking and currency committee, stating:

"The council is unanimously of the opinion that these purchases of foreign silver should be discontinued forthwith, particularly in view of the fact that silver purchases increase the already excessively large bank reserves."

Ryburn G. Clay, of Atlanta, is a member of the council.

M'Dougall Urges WPA Resources As a Tool To Solve Relief Problem

State Administrator of Federal Agency Recommends Carefully Planned Program of Public Improvements in Address at Luncheon of Exchange Club.

"A carefully planned program of public improvements, with the resources of the WPA as a powerful tool to make the program work, will go a long way toward solving the direct relief puzzle," Robert L. MacDougall, state WPA administrator, told members of the Exchange Club at its luncheon yesterday.

"You probably have been struck, as I have been, by recent newspaper stories on the relief situation," he added. "Many of the stories cite instances of needy people calling for direct relief who are eligible for WPA employment but for whom no work relief is available because projects are lacking."

"We Georgia citizens have never used the resources of the WPA to the fullest in meeting these distressing community problems. It is probably because we have failed to realize the place of the federal work program in basic long-range planning."

MacDougall asserted that Georgia's needs for its people and communities are the sole guides for the operation of the WPA in this state. WPA projects give work and the local communities have the advantages of the improvements.

What Is Barber? He Cuts Beards, Law Head Rules. Attorney General Ellis Arnall answered that question yesterday, in ruling that if a barber wishes to become a hair dresser he must pass an examination and have a license.

Arnall distinguished between a barber, who for compensation shaves the masculine beard, and hair dresser or beautician, "who does permanent waving of the human hair for compensation."

The attorney general said it was his opinion that when a person is qualified with the State Board of Barber and Hair Dresser Examiners as a barber, and also as a beautician, the board should issue him a separate license for each profession.

Punch Leads to Punch

LILLIAN ROTH.

LILLIAN ROTH TELLS OF CRACK ON JAW

Actress Has Hard Time Speaking as She Describes Scene.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(P)—Actress Lillian Roth waggled a painfully wired-up jaw in court today as evidence that a jaw-breaking punch was her reward for what she called an attempt to "reform" Eugene J. Weiner, 36-year-old bond salesman.

She said they had dinner out, with two (only two) Martinis, returned to the apartment, played cards awhile and then she retired briefly to put on a housecoat.

"He was standing in the dinette with a glass in his hand when I came out," she said. "I said to him, 'Oh, I see you're just like everybody says you are.'"

To Magistrate William A. Farrell she explained: "I meant that everybody was saying he was drunk."

"When I said that," the actress continued, "he hit me on the right side of the jaw. I don't remember falling but the next thing I remember was getting up. I got onto the bed, and the bed was covered with blood."

At the CITY HALL. Mayor Hartsfield yesterday had on his desk an agreement between the city and Fulton county for joint participation of the two governments in construction of the West North avenue underpass at Marietta street. Council approved the resolution, contingent on the federal government and municipality reaching an agreement concerning sewer line and water main adjustments incident to the improvement. The mayor yesterday had not acted on any of the measures sent to him from Monday's session of council and the aldermanic board.

Mrs. Frances Newman, secretary to Raymond W. Torres, engineer-secretary of the city planning commission, yesterday had her first new desk in the 13 years she has been at her present post. It was a modern, metal-bound affair done in mahogany.

Job and salary classification of the 2,550 non-school employees of the municipality will cost the city $8,000. Mayor Hartsfield yesterday had on his desk a resolution increasing the previous $5,000 allocation for the classification by another $3,000.

Miss Mildred Garner yesterday was functioning as secretary to Lawrence James, veteran assistant city comptroller. Appointment of Miss Garner was made on recommendation of the city personnel department.

L. A. Moyer, executive director of the United States Civil Service Commission; Arthur Fleming, board member, and O. E. Myers, manager of the fifth district office, will be guests of members of the Atlanta Personnel Board at a luncheon beginning at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Atlanta Athletic Club. Gus Harper, chairman; Aubrey Milam, secretary; and J. P. Allen comprise the board. Carl T. Sutherland, city personnel director, also will be present.

Former Mayor Pro Tem Alvin L. Richards, practicing attorney, was back at his desk yesterday after a brief illness.

George I. Simons, general manager of city parks, yesterday was lamenting the inclement weather. He says "it's lousy for park receipts for golf, tennis and even the Cyclorama are failing to attract a corporal's guard."

Hull Can Be Next President, Kaltenborn Tells Reporter

Noted Radio Commentator Says Secretary of State Has Confidence of the People; Believes Dewey Is Far Ahead of GOP Candidates.

By L. A. FARRELL. Thomas E. Dewey is "far out in front" in the fight for the Republican presidential nomination and Secretary of State Cordell Hull would be a "happy Democratic choice" in the event President Roosevelt does not stand for a third term, H. V. Kaltenborn said in an interview here last night.

In Atlanta for a lecture under the auspices of the committee for the Eggleston Memorial hospital, the noted radio commentator and news analyst added his belief that Hull would be elected to the presidency "because of his experience and the confidence the people have in him."

Kaltenborn said he felt that the part of Secretary Hull has played in steering the Roosevelt foreign policy has drawn many Americans to him.

"Treaties Satisfactory." "His trade treaties, too, are proving satisfactory, and they will count a lot in the election if Mr. Hull is the nominee," the Columbia Broadcasting System's world affairs expert said. "As a matter of fact the foreign policy of the present administration, steered by Mr. Hull, has done much to bring about a revival of Mr. Roosevelt's popularity."

The commentator said he felt that Mr. Dewey's youth and inexperience would be against him in a national campaign. Dewey is the Manhattan district attorney.

"But at that Mr. Dewey is far out in front of all other aspirants for the Republican nomination," Kaltenborn said. "No other candidate can approach him."

Kaltenborn was willing to discuss world affairs freely, but he hadn't received any news in two or three hours and stated plainly that no one can discuss European events without keeping up with the news every minute.

"You can't talk about Europe until you have seen every last-minute bulletin," he explained. Later, just before making his talk at the city auditorium he spent an hour poring over news dispatches and discussed events of the day as well as the year in his lecture.

Asked if he thought a major offensive would be opened by either the Germans or the Allies in the spring, Kaltenborn commented: "There is no more reason to wait until spring than there is to open up tomorrow," he said. "It is just a question when the Germans and Allies feel that they are ready to make whatever sacrifices are necessary to gain what is to be gained. That is liable to be in the spring but it is just as liable to be at any other time."

10-to-1 Too Much. He said that as long as the Russians had only five men in the field to every one Finn, Finland was winning its war with Russia. "But when Russia was able to make it 10 to 1 the Mannerheim line began to fall," he asserted. "It is the overwhelming numbers that count and Germany and the Allies have about an equal number of men on the western front."

Kaltenborn visited the Eggleston hospital and attended a dinner given by Wiley Moore at Lakeview more before appearing at the auditorium. He praised highly the work being done at the hospital.

The noted commentator said he planned to visit Europe in the spring but would return to America in time to broadcast his comments and opinions from both the Republican and Democratic conventions in June and July.

FORUM FOLLOWS TALK BY KALTENBORN. Kaltenborn spoke last night and was well received by a large crowd which gathered at the municipal auditorium to hear him interpret the news.

Robert Strickland, Atlanta banker, presided, and a committee comprised of Major Clark Howell, Jesse Draper and Legare Davis assisted in handling open forum questions submitted by the audience after the conclusion of Kaltenborn's speech.

CHAIN STORES SPUR U. S. USE OF COTTON. Georgia Expected To Benefit From Drive of Non-Grocery Firms.

Initiation of a nation-wide campaign by non-grocery chain store companies to stimulate domestic cotton consumption should benefit Georgia and the entire south, Columbus Roberts, commissioner of agriculture, said yesterday.

Roberts explained that the promotional campaign is sponsored by the cotton consumption council, composed of representatives of the government, cotton growers, co-operatives, cotton manufacturers, retail distributors, and allied industries.

Former Mayor Pro Tem Alvin L. Richards, practicing attorney, was back at his desk yesterday after a brief illness.

'Go to School, Herbert,' Letter to Eva's Son Urges

Elderly Woman Writes Boy of Advantages of Education.

Among the many letters received by The Constitution containing offers of help for the poverty-stricken family whose story was told in the columns of the paper was the following yesterday from an out-of-town woman, who described herself as 74 years old and barely able to make ends meet. Yet out of her store, though it was not financial—she felt that the one thing she could do was to write a letter to Herbert, 14-year-old son of Eva and Fred, who will not go to school.

This is the letter which she asked be forwarded to him by The Constitution:

"Dear Herbert: Recently I heard about you, that you do not like to go to school. Well, I wish to tell you some of the reasons that people have for going to school as long as they can go—whether they like to go or not. As a matter of fact many boys do not like to go to school, but they are wise enough to know that older people know what is best for boys and girls to do.

"Uneducated Limited." "Someone figured out just how much money is paid for a boy to go as far in school as completing the high school course. It works out like this: "A young man without education has more limited chances to get work; he is limited to the simplest kind of manual labor that usually pays about $1 a day, and nothing on bad days, but if he put in every working day (there are about 300 in a year), he would make just $300 for his year's work. If he was able to work 40 years he would have earned $12,000.

"The young man who keeps in school until he has a high school education, can still do any work that the uneducated man can do (and do it usually much better, because his education has sharpened his senses and given him better ideas) but until very recently the educated man did not do day work, but was paid a salary by the month, and $100 a month was perhaps an average salary. In a year he would earn $1,200 (four times as much as the uneducated fellow could earn) and in 40 years he would earn $48,000.

"But that is only one point or one item as to the value of an education.

"During the World War, a young man that I knew wanted to be an aviator. He was naturally gifted as a mechanic, but he had not been to school enough to learn to concentrate, and he had to give up his desire to be an aviator because he had not gone to school long enough.

"You cannot even enjoy the movies as much without an education—so many things will be blank to you because you do not know enough.

"The more schooling you have, the more ways you have to have good times.

"This is a very long letter, but I must tell you of a boy who was so crazy to go to school that he walked many hundred miles to try to get in a school he heard of.

"This was a Negro boy, born a slave. In those days it was against the law for anyone to teach a Negro to read.

School a Heaven. "This slave boy used to be sent to carry his young mistress's things to school for her, and the school seemed heaven to him.

"This boy was named Booker Washington, and he worked until he got to go to school. There he studied hard and learned much and became a great teacher himself—and a great man.

"The book about him, 'Up from Slavery,' is truly a great book. If you could get somebody to read it to you at the library, I believe you would change your mind and hurry off to school every school day.

"I have said a lot in this letter, but I have not said half the good things about going to school.

"From an old lady who wishes to be your friend."

LIVING COSTS SAME AS IN JANUARY, 1939

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—(AP)—Living costs of wage earners in the United States last month were about the same as in January, 1939, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today.

The board, a research organization financed chiefly by corporations, estimated there was a slight rise over December costs, caused mainly by higher food and coal prices. The board's living cost index for the month was 85.4 per cent of the 1923 average compared with 85.3 in December and 85.4 in January, 1939.

SON OF VICE-CONSUL HAS TWO BIRTHDAYS

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Maybe it's the dream of every youngster to have two birthday celebrations in one year. For Richard Signor, 6, it came true.

The son of W. W. Signor, of Ypsilanti, Mich., American vice consul at Melbourne, marked his anniversary February 8 on both sides of the international date line.

The ship's steward gave two parties for him. With his parents, Richard returned to this country from Australia aboard the Matson liner Monterey.

EPISCOPALIAN LAYMEN TO SPUR SCHOLARSHIP

GENEVA, N. Y., Feb. 20.—Dr. William Alfred Eddy, president of Hobart College, said today a permanent group of laymen of the Episcopal church would be formed to "promote the cause of Christian scholarship in colleges and universities."

The decision was reached last week-end at an informal conference on the Hobart campus, attended by representatives from Amherst, Hobart, Kenyon and Smith colleges; Columbia, Princeton and Yale universities; the universities of the south, Illinois and Cincinnati and the Central Theological Seminary.

MURPHEY CANDLER CALLS FOR PRIMARY

Decatur Attorney Lashes at the 'Perfidy of Our Leaders.'

By The Associated Press.

Murphey Candler Jr., Decatur attorney, assailed yesterday "the perfidy of our leaders who would send an untrained Georgia delegation to the national Democratic convention and called for a Presidential preferential primary.

In an address in behalf of the preferential primary committee Candler charged Governor Rivers with "endeavoring to hand-pick the delegates to the Chicago convention without giving the people of Georgia any choice by which those delegates will know who the people prefer to represent the Democratic party in the general election for President."

"I say it is strange that this inherent right should be questioned in this state," Candler said. "But stranger still it comes to be when we consider the fact that this unholy effort is being made by some of our leaders, by some of those whom the people of this state have entrusted with power; yes, by some of those chosen by that very right of suffrage which they now seek to withhold from the people."

Candler urged voters to petition members of the state Democratic executive committee immediately for a Presidential preferential primary.

Make Own Happiness.

Most Ecuadorians can't afford bridge tables and radios. So they make their own fun and music. A lot of them are illiterate. So they live in blissful ignorance of the world beyond the mountains and the sea, happy in a small sphere they understand.

Ecuador doesn't have many factories. So the people are craftsmen, not laborers. They carve beautiful figures out of rosewood and mahogany, and the ivory-like nut of the tagua palm. They hammer symmetrical bowls out of silver and weave soft blankets out of llama and rare alpaca wool.

Few Ecuadorians work in stores. Instead they have their own small shops. Some sell hand-made shoes and old Spanish silver. Others sell brass and copper pots, saddles, and paintings. Other stores sell corn, rope sandals, and brilliant Indian blankets. Shopkeepers of Quito sell what they like, and open and close their stores when they please.

The shops of Quito are mostly dark holes in the wall. They are under the heavy Roman arches of the cathedral terrace, between the supporting pillars of the government place, or in the shade of the arcade around two sides of the Plaza de la Independencia.

Quito stores don't sell cheap ready-made clothes, but bolts of hand-woven homespun and cotton goods. Wedged in between copper kitchen utensils in a Quito shop will be a Nativity group, molded in clay and with the Virgin and St. Joseph in native dress, or a small statue of St. Francis, delicately carved in ivory by some unknown artist.

Ecuador obviously is backward. And perhaps because of it, its people are so pleasant and polite. Poor Ecuadorians study the moon, the sun and the earth instead of textbooks. And perhaps because of it their paint, carve and compose music.

They don't know about fashion, so they dress in whatever pleases them. They don't go to the movies, so they make their own dramas out of the stuff of their lives.

People of Dignity.

Ecuador is backward, so the people have grace and leisure and time to sit and talk along the roadside, in cafes, or on benches in sunny plazas.

Ecuadorians aren't busy, so they grow outward, not inward. They tell their troubles to one another, and take them to their churches where they find peace in wistful imploring hymns.

Ecuador still is in the Middle Ages. Its people are artists, not tenders of machines. They don't commit suicide. They don't go crazy. They aren't criminals. Divorce is rare. They don't starve, and they don't ask charity. They have dignity and breadth, and get full measure out of life.

Ecuadorians, rich and poor, still are men and women, and not assembly line imitations. Ecuadorians, rich and poor, live in the sun, not at the bottom of man-made canyons and breathe the clean air of the high Andes and the Pacific beaches.

The lower the standard, the better the living, or so it seems in Ecuador. And we wonder, if 100 years from now, the Middle Ages still will be called dark.

(Tomorrow Spalding tells more about Ecuador's charms, charms which he declares makes the little nation a vacationist's paradise. Soft-voiced people, and their unsparring efforts to please the visitor, make him want to tarry for a few years, and "mellow" under the friendly sun.)

Spalding Finds Self 'Rich' In Nation Free of Worry

(Jack Spalding finds the people of Ecuador are backward, but tells you today about their compensations, which permit them to live in contentment and dignity, free from suicide, divorce, starvation, and misery. He finds the atmosphere of the Middle Ages holds a lesson for 20th century mankind.)

By JACK SPALDING, Staff Correspondent.

QUITO, Ecuador, Wednesday, Feb. 14.—(By Mail.)—Not the least of Ecuador's many charms is the sure, a collapsible currency that right now is pegged by executive decree at 15 to the dollar.

For the first and last time in our life we're rich. We parade the streets of Quito with 100 sure bills bulging our pockets out of shape. It's the most exhilarating feeling we've had since we closed our last schoolbook. With a $100 traveler's check you can live like a King in Quito for months.

Ecuador, like the south, is proof of the heretical theory that the lower the standard, the better the living. The country is poorer than Job's turkey, yet if you except plumbing and supervised playgrounds, lives better than many richer countries. We don't believe anybody in Ecuador ever starved to death, and we're positive that nobody, except possibly government officials, ever had a nervous breakdown or died of worry.

Make Own Happiness.

Most Ecuadorians can't afford bridge tables and radios. So they make their own fun and music. A lot of them are illiterate. So they live in blissful ignorance of the world beyond the mountains and the sea, happy in a small sphere they understand.

Ecuador doesn't have many factories. So the people are craftsmen, not laborers. They carve beautiful figures out of rosewood and mahogany, and the ivory-like nut of the tagua palm. They hammer symmetrical bowls out of silver and weave soft blankets out of llama and rare alpaca wool.

Few Ecuadorians work in stores. Instead they have their own small shops. Some sell hand-made shoes and old Spanish silver. Others sell brass and copper pots, saddles, and paintings. Other stores sell corn, rope sandals, and brilliant Indian blankets. Shopkeepers of Quito sell what they like, and open and close their stores when they please.

The shops of Quito are mostly dark holes in the wall. They are under the heavy Roman arches of the cathedral terrace, between the supporting pillars of the government place, or in the shade of the arcade around two sides of the Plaza de la Independencia.

SHEPPARD ADMITS ANOTHER BURGLARY

Youth, Already Under 19 Years' Probation, Given New Sentence.

Life for Robert Sheppard, 18-year-old youth, is rapidly becoming just one burglary charge after another.

Sheppard yesterday pleaded guilty in Fulton superior court to theft of a radio from a neighbor on Piedmont road, and was sentenced by Judge Hugh M. Dorsey to serve two years.

In June, 1938, Sheppard pleaded guilty to a similar burglary charge and was sentenced by Judge Dorsey to serve one year on the public works and 19 on probation.

But in sentencing him to the two years the judge did not revoke Sheppard's previous probation.

CAT DOESN'T FORGET, HER RESCUER FINDS

FAIRMONT, Minn., Feb. 20.—(AP)—Julius Behrens had a cat that was plenty wild, but he found out unwittingly the other day how to tame it. He heard a meowing from under a water tank he had banked with earth 26 days ago to prevent freezing and when he dug into it, there was tabby.

Now she is so chummy Behrens can hardly get her out of the house.

ATLANTA, GA., FEBRUARY 21, 1940.

Facts on Relief

Betty Mathis, with her stories of the "Fred and Eva" family has focused the attention of all Atlanta, and Fulton county, upon the relief problem. She has thereby, performed a public service which may well take rank with any individual contribution to Atlanta's betterment of recent years.

For the first time Atlantans as a whole have been given an accurate, factual report on the relief problem from both ends of the situation. First, through the realistic story of "Fred and Eva" everyone knows the problem just as it appears to the pitiful, hungry ones who plead, with despair in their eyes, for food.

Secondly, through the revealing table of relief revenue and expenditures, published in The Constitution of last Sunday, every citizen secured, for the first time, a complete factual explanation of the county relief system.

That table shows, while the county ostensibly provides approximately $60,000 a month for relief, only $13,570.24 is actually available, each month, to provide food, clothing, fuel and shelter for 6,267 persons on direct relief. This is, in round figures, $2 a month per person, with which to pay rent, provide warmth and food and furnish necessary clothing.

The truth is a large proportion of that $60,000 is not provided for relief. Apparently every county contribution to any sort of welfare agency or activity is deducted from this sum. No doubt the agencies and activities which get this money are worthy and should be helped. No citizen will begrudge the appropriations made for charity institutions, for hospitals, for sewing room projects, for shoe shops, garden projects or renovation of the welfare offices on Pryor street. They all sound like commendable expenditures and, undoubtedly, were backed by public approval when requests for the money were made to the county authorities.

Surely, however, it is not necessary to take the money out of the income of the welfare board for every appropriation dealing with human aid? It should be possible, when the county has to make an appropriation, for instance, for hospitalization at Grady, to find some other source of the necessary money than by taking it out of the fund which the general public has believed is dedicated to feeding the hungry.

The county provided funds for support of the almshouse, for burial of paupers, for care of wards of the juvenile court, for the various institutions for the helpless, long before there was any special tax levied for relief purposes. Those same funds should be found today, without taking the money from direct relief.

The relief money, that $60,000 a month, is derived from a special tax, levied for that specific purpose. This tax was not given public approval on the understanding that more than half of the revenue was to be used in place of funds previously supplied from the general county treasury.

The blunt truth of the matter is that the county has shifted between $20,000 and $30,000 per month of regular normal expenditure to this relief revenue and has thus had that amount available to apply in other ways. Which was not what the taxpayers public understood to be intended when the special relief tax was approved.

The fact that, for every dollar expended in actual, direct relief, almost another dollar is spent on administrative salaries for welfare workers and for traveling expenses, suggests, also, somewhat excessive overhead. This, however, is explained by the comparatively small residue left for direct relief, after all the deductions for other causes have been made. If the amount used for direct relief was as intended and publicly believed, the administrative cost would be reasonable.

Undoubtedly, the relief set-up demands drastic revision and the first step should be a removal of the burden placed upon relief funds by loading all these other appropriations upon its already slender treasury.

A new dilemma, of a chemical nature, arises to bedevil Carol of Rumania. The big boy would like to know what to pour on troubled oil.

The skeptics society plans to bring in a fishwife at an early meeting, to see how the conversation stacks up with latter-day diplomacy.

Airports Needed.

The necessity of early expansion of airport facilities in the south if this section is to take part in the anticipated development of aviation was emphasized at the meeting, held here, of air program leaders from seven southern states.

Undoubtedly, with the coming of the modern, comparably safe and easy to operate airplane, built in quantity and to sell for $1,000 or less, the private use of planes will soon be a commonplace. This is all the more certain when it is remembered the federal government is today teaching tens of thousands of young men to fly, in the universities and at the army, navy and flying service training stations.

The need for airport expansion is well evidenced in the local situation. Candler Field, which when first constructed was a model of its kind, is already almost outmoded. Certainly it is used to utmost capacity, with the great air lines, commercial flying services and private plane owners all compelled to make it their center. The density of air traffic at the field is now so great that safety has already been lessened and any further increase would constitute serious hazard.

It is now planned to construct a new landing field on the site of the old Camp Gordon. If this does no more than transfer the privately owned planes from Candler Field it will be extremely valuable because of the relief from congestion there.

It was pointed out at the meeting here on Monday that the construction of new fields in this area means an increase in flying service here through feeder lines, etc. It will also serve to consolidate Atlanta's position as the aviation hub of the southeast.

The federal government has a fund of $125,000,000 for regional airport expansion. With its essential nation-wide service and with the speed of transport through the air, aviation necessarily becomes more of a national than a state, or local, problem. If there is any field for development which should rightfully and logically be undertaken at federal expense, it is this of aviation and airport expansion.

It is to be hoped, for the sake of the coming day when private plane ownership will be the customary thing, that the south and Atlanta may quickly acquire better, and far more numerous, flying fields.

The Altmak

When a policeman sees a crime being committed in a house he does not wait upon a search warrant before entering and taking action. That, it would seem, is the answer to the furious controversy now raging over the release of English prisoners from the Altmak—the Graf Spee's auxiliary. It was not a time for diplomatic niceties in the eyes of the British navy, since that probably would have meant the escape of the vessel and prison camps for the Englishmen aboard.

Norway's position in the matter is extremely delicate, although it is difficult to understand the cursory examination made at Bergen. But the very fact that the German commander denied the presence of prisoners indicates the Nazis were fully prepared to use every subterfuge to get the ship home. The seething bitterness of Berlin is perhaps a clue to the disappointment rather than to the respect for neutrality which has been so deep in the hearts of the German government; a respect amply demonstrated in the instances of Austria, Czechoslovakia and Poland.

The British protest is almost equal in bitterness to that of Germany, and one is justified in hazarding a guess that the matter will rest in the impasse created by the demands of both principals.

The most striking factor in the dispute is the renewed evidence of the incredibly delicate balance which must be struck by the neutral nations of Europe in a war which is not yet a real conflict of arms. On the other hand, it is doubtful that Britain deliberately invaded Norwegian waters with the intent of forcing a new "front". The action of the Cossack was in the tradition of the British navy, and the orders from the Admiralty bore the unmistakable imprint of Winston Churchill. English seamen were aboard a prison ship. The crackled radio order to rescue the prisoners with or without the permission of the Norwegian government was all necessary. It would be for the diplomats to argue the validity of the action.

In Cleveland a grim wife ran over her man with the family car in an attempt to sober him up. "Heavens!" he cried, "are they motorizing the pink elephants?"

Again, the pro and con of the college grid game are threshed out, to the inevitable conclusion: We have to have football to raise coaches to teach football.

Angry taxpayers by the thousands have marched on Albany, N. Y., for a showdown. If the treasury needs a transfusion, they cry, let it hunt up other turnips.

What is more stimulating, in the quadrennial year, than to see the peerless political leader swarming across lots to get in front of some followers.

In conservative Brooklyn, a citizen has been shipped to prison for two and one-half years for selling "magic" without the formality of getting elected to congress.

Editorial of the Day

FREEDOM MUST BE GUARDED.
(From the Wichita Beacon.)

Despite assurances by government officials at odd moments since the European war began, the American press would not be permitted to go on unchecked if this country ever became involved in war. Professor Harold L. Cross, of Columbia University and special counsel to the American Publishers Association, predicted recently.

Professor Cross contended that emergencies, even those as great as war itself, do not justify curtailment of press freedom; that the very liberty under which newspapers operate today was obtained during an emergency.

It is unlikely that any section of the press would turn to treason during a war involving this country. Freedom of the press remains a precious American heritage. The United States can never afford to dispense with it, even temporarily.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER

PROFESSIONAL JOB WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The popping eyes and slightly disjointed nose of a leading Garnerite constitute the most interesting political spectacle currently on view in Washington. The Garnerite's shrewdness is only exceeded by his amiability, and his amiability only by his experience. He has just returned from a trip into the unfriendly land of the Yankee, to see what could be done for his candidate in New Hampshire. His eyes are popping, his nose is slightly out of joint because of what he found there.

"I don't know whether it's Tommy Corcoran or somebody else who's running this third-term thing," he says frankly. "But whoever it is, I know they're doing a damn professional job."

THIRD TERM OR ELSE The story told by the returning Garnerite is even more interesting than the recently told story of the third-term movement in Massachusetts. It begins with the fact that the Garner high command has never been averse to seeing delegates go to Postmaster General James A. Farley, a friendly potentate.

Until recently Jim Farley claimed, and with good reason, that he had the New Hampshire delegation cold. The local Democratic organization was sure to name the delegates. As New Hampshire is a normally Republican state, Farley had had much to do with building up the organization. The Garnerites, as well as the Burton K. Wheelerites and the Paul V. McNuttites, naturally credited Farley's claim. They were therefore not disposed to try to go into New Hampshire for the primary on March 12.

About the time of the Democratic national committee meeting in Washington, however, the New Dealers managing the third-term movement plunged into the fray. The New Hampshire primary is the first in the country. The New Hampshire's Democratic delegates pledged to the third-term would be good psychology. They wanted the delegates, and they persuaded the ominously named new assistant secretary of the treasury, John L. Sullivan, to join their side.

Sullivan was Jim Farley's chief New Hampshire henchman in the 1936 election, and just missed being elected governor in 1938. He has prestige among the local Democrats. It made some sense when he arrived in Massachusetts, H. H. and planted the third-term standard in front of the Mansion House. He announced that, unless the organization agreed to transfer its slate of delegates from Farley to Roosevelt, he would enter a third-term slate of his own. The organization, being heavily dependent on federal patronage, saw the light at once. Although a scattering of delegates will run for other candidates, the third-term slate is now expected to carry the New Hampshire primary without serious opposition.

JIM IN A BOX In truth, the New Hampshire situation demonstrates that the President, or rather the third-termers, have Jim Farley in a sort of box. Unless he is willing to oppose his chief in the open, he cannot object to organization men plumping for the third term, even though they may have their real allegiance to him. At the same time, the organization men are soily tempted for they want the President can get the nomination if he wants it, thus it is always safe to come out for him, with the thought in mind that if the President doesn't want it, other candidates will still be grateful for support.

The position is hardly fair to Farley, but there is nothing much he can do about it, as the story of Massachusetts also suggests. It is already known how Jim Farley told the President that he would leave the Massachusetts delegates, how the President offered no objection, and how, after the delegates had given their pledges to Farley, they suddenly announced that the President was still first choice. What is not known is that Sullivan, stopping off to see the Massachusetts leaders on his way back from New Hampshire, was largely responsible for the abrupt change of heart.

In Massachusetts as in New Hampshire, there was a threat of an opposition third-term slate if the leaders did not go along, in this case probably sponsored by Joseph P. Kennedy. In Massachusetts as in New Hampshire, the leaders simply chose to follow the easier course. They can hardly be blamed, with California's Governor Olson out for the third term, and the President topping the betting in the Illinois and Wisconsin primaries as well.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Little Jimmy, Idealist.

The young fellow was born with a predisposition toward curing all the troubles of the world. He was, at the time of this story, quite young. Say about 10 years old.

He had, by that time, arrived at the definite conclusion that there were many things wrong with the world and the ways in which they lived.

Not far from his home there were squalid tenement slums, where dirt and noise and obscene language and drunkenness were, apparently, the chief factors in life. Often, in walking to the street car line to go to town, Jimmy passed through this district, so much lower, socially, than the sober brown-fronted row of houses of which his home was one.

He saw the dirt, in the gutters and ground into the brick of the houses. He could smell it, too. That unmistakable, rancid odor of stale air and unwashed bodies and evidence of cooking months done which wafted out of open doorways as he passed.

No one could fail to notice the noise. The shrill voices of slattern women and the yelling of uncontrolled archers, at play in the same dirty gutters. And the steady roar of traffic, as heavy-hoofed horses hauled steel-wheeled lorries along the cobbled streets.

And the obscenity was revealed in store, though their meanings were unknown to Jimmy were, nevertheless, acknowledged as evil by turned eyes and too blatant blindness. Words scrawled in chalk on walls and wooden hoardings.

The One Cure-All.

It was, perhaps, natural that this boy should conceive the one certain cure for all these nastinesses of life to be preaching. His family was strict, and he was a churchgoer. The chapel, rather, it was the most important thing in life. Jimmy had to attend the little, nonconformist chapel three times every Sunday. Morning, afternoon and evening. He had learned that Christian Endeavor, prayer meeting and other midweek gatherings.

So Jimmy knew that, if he could only have the opportunity to talk to all the wretched people he saw in those slums, he could help them how to improve their lot. How, in fact, to become as nice people as his own family.

He never doubted that, if he preached to the women he had seen reeling along the street on a Saturday night, sodden with gin, they would immediately abhor the Devil's brew and start lives of teetotal abstinence. Funny, wasn't it, no one had ever told them, before?

If he could only tell the noisy, dirty, objectionable little boys and girls who, in their scanty rags played in the alleys and gutters, that nice people read and believed the Bible, that they were living in filth, those boys and girls would promptly become neat, well-behaved, nicely washed and dressed and combed youngsters like himself and his brothers and sisters.

So He Set To Work.

In the backyard of Jimmy's home was a lot of sand. That was the type of soil, in that particular location. Not dry, loose sand, but moist sand, hard packed, that you could dig in and build with.

Jimmy knew that the first essential for a preacher was a pulpit.

So he took his spade and went to work on the sand. He constructed quite a rostrum there, in the back yard. With a place for the preacher to stand—rather in a hole—and a sand shelf for book from which to preach. And heches of sand in front, for the congregation.

Then he printed, neatly with his printing blocks, an invitation to enter the backyard and hear some preaching. And he hung that sign in the gate in front of the house, on the street.

But no one accepted the invitation. No stranger came to the backyard mourners' benches. Jimmy's mother, seeing the sign, took it down but smiled as she did so. For she understood her funny little son.

And the following day a particularly disagreeable insect, with many legs, ran across the sand inside the pulpit and vomited a pulvis and nauseating to look at that Jimmy filled in the sand as quickly as he could.

And two days later he constructed a most marvelous sand battle-ship there.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Sunday, February 21, 1915: "London, February 20.—A German submarine made its appearance in the Irish sea this morning and torpedoed without notice the British coasting steamer Cambank, of 440 tons register."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Friday, February 21, 1890:

"Now that spring is coming and the fresh odors of the earth begin to vie with the aroma of fertilizers, the great and good plantation mule girls up his loins with a fresh mortgage and goes forth to the field."

State's Right.

The old battle of the states' rights still rages in Switzerland where the Federal Confederation is still just that and nothing more. Although the Swiss army is under a united federal command it is still composed of the cantonal armies which (on paper) are kept separate from the federal forces.

One regiment belongs to the canton and Republic of Geneva, another to the "canton and Republic of Basel City" and so on.

When the high command recently decided to incorporate certain units of the Italian-speaking "canton and Republic of Ticino" on the Italian border into a new Fourth Army Corps for southern Switzerland there was a terrific howl from the cantonal government.

The Italian-speaking Ninth Mountain brigade, said to be the pride of the Ticino grand council to the federal authorities, should remain intact for "the honor and dignity of the canton of Ticino."

Egg Rule Broken.

Buying an egg due her on her ration card and paying a single pennny more for it than the government price commissar permitted, netted a German hausfrau a fine of 100 marks, approximately $40. The grocer was arrested for profiteering and faces a much higher penalty.

Under Germany's war-time anti-profiteering law, both buyer and seller are liable for punishment if prices fixed by the government are disregarded.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Failed of NEW YORK, Feb. 20. Edwin Leahy, of the Chicago Daily News, a reporter who has made a specialty of union affairs, has just finished a series of 10 stories, intended, as he said, "to allay the increasing public suspicion of the labor movement."

"The purpose of these articles," he wrote, "has been to offer a basis for the conclusion that the vast majority of the trade unions are on the up-and-up and that the black sheep among them are giving the whole movement a 'bum rap.'"

Having read his series, it is my conclusion that he did not accomplish his purpose.

In the first place, he didn't show that the vast majority of the unions are on the up-and-up, but took the position that only the bad unions receive notoriety. It is true that those unions which have received notoriety lately—namely, the so-called Stagehands' Union and the Union of Building Service Employees—are bad unions and not on the up-and-up. But it doesn't follow that all of the bad unions have received the same measure of publicity.

Bad Lot

The Teamsters, for example, enjoy a better reputation than they deserve because their national leadership is personally clean. In detail, however, the Teamsters have been a bad lot in New York, and it is well known, of course, that on the Pacific coast, under Dave Beck, this union established a Fascist dictatorship which not only undertook the legitimate and laudable task of raising the Teamsters' wages but returned to limit and regulate business competition by the decrees of one man.

Mr. Beck boasted that he had placed an embargo on California beer in Washington and Oregon and had taken over certain breweries and was running them because the Teamsters were having a jurisdictional fight with the brewery workers.

Behind the curtain of privacy in some unions, the AFL, while claiming great privilege as the body of labor with a capital L, has not delivered an account of its trust, and there is so much unrest and complaint within the unions that the suspicion arises that all is not necessarily on the up-and-up in the quiet unions. Union rank and file keep quiet for other reasons than content.

Also Were It should be noted that the Stagehands' and Building Service Employees' unions also enjoyed quiet until a few weeks ago, and that when that quiet was disturbed the American Federation of Labor was not responsible for the outcry. The AFL was content to take its toll, or lug, off the top of the dues of the members and to let unionizing criminals get away with extortion and terrorism until the rotten conditions were exposed. Ever since then, although the best minds of the Federation have held a meeting in Miami, they have not deplored the rottenness itself but the exposure.

It seems not to occur to the American Federation of Labor that it has responsibilities to the nation which are equal to its great privileges. The betrayal of labor occurs not when foul conditions are exposed but when men elected to responsible office neglect their duty to guard the sanctity of the AFL charters, and certainly to keep these charters out of the hands of criminals.

Not Spirit The rank and file are not necessarily content because they contribute of their poor pay to keep wages going to racketeers who have been sent to prison for robbing them. It is not in a spirit of loyalty that the rank and file re-elect thieves to office in their unions so that they may be robbed again and again.

The American Federation of Labor needs a reorganization and a spirit of spirit in its national authority. It needs men on top who will instantly challenge intrusion into labor with a capital L by thugs who have been underworld characters ever since they were old enough to snatch a purse and give the whole movement an account of union money by arrogant grafters with prosperous side-lines who rise to the command of big component groups.

Mr. Leahy is correct, I think, in saying that the black sheep unions are giving the whole movement a bum rap. But the high command was not ignorant of the character of these black sheep unions. And still nothing has been done to this very hour to clean up those unions, and that is a worse rap, because it shows that the AFL doesn't care.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

MR. McINTOSH SPEAKING A wide swath of tornado swept Albany. It still looks like those pictures we used to see of cities bombed in Poland. And like those we still see of cities bombed in Finland.

But the sound of the hammer and the saw are heard on the air. And the people are planning. Mr. Henry McIntosh, the very able editor of the very interesting newspaper, the Albany Herald, said of the problem:

"We are trying to plan the things we always wished had been done in building Albany's business section, but it is difficult. Many businessmen are out of business until their buildings are restored. No one can blame them for wanting to hurry. Everyone wants them back in business."

"But we are getting wonderful co-operation. A central architectural office with a government architect to act as a clearing office will be set up within a few days. Then we will really try to make all building conform to the plan. Everyone wants to do it. It's an opportunity to put into stone and concrete and bricks some of the things we all have wished had been done in the beginning."

COURT ALLEY There is, for instance, Court alley. It is a narrow alley way running off the main street just across from the courthouse. There is a plan proposed to widen it. If the plan is put into effect the alley will become a sort of parkway with grass and trees. No vehicles would be permitted on it. It will add immeasurably to the attractiveness of the city.

Another plan would build a new armory just at the end of Pine street at the Flint and thereby release much needed room in the city hall, where the armory now is.

Businessmen are intrigued with the idea of planning. Most persons interested in their cities often have wished things could be done with planned building. Albany, like Gainesville, is busy with plans to make a more attractive city rise from the wreckage of boards, bricks, stone and glass which litter the path of the storm.

The damage not yet has been estimated. It likely will run well over a hundred million dollars. Viewing the wreckage today one still can but shudder and vainly attempt to imagine the velocity of the wind which can do such damage and go whirling off into the heavens, unexplained and terrible in its power and mystery.

A FEW ODDITIES Mr. McIntosh's Herald collected some of the most unusual things, some of which test credulity. On the day of the storm I saw a large grocery store building blown away, with boxcars turned over across the street. Yet the fruit and vegetables in the store still were in orderly array.

In a candy store, one end of one box of candy was blown off and a spool of thread blown into the box.

In the Gordon hotel, which felt the force of the storm, a traveling man awoke to find his shirt blown out of the room. As he stood groping around by flash light, a cellophane-covered package blew into the room. It was a shirt from a haberdashery store across the way. It was his size. Fantastic, yet true.

In an upstairs office on Pine street the front wall was blown away and furniture blown out. On a desk there was a loose file of papers. None were disturbed.

Chairs from the Elks' Club were blown across the street into the Gordon hotel.

Of six palm trees on the courthouse lawn, one was blown down, one blown away, a third shattered and the three remaining ones left undamaged.

In one store sharpened pencils left on a desk were blown about, making marks on the ceilings and walls which looked like eccentric cracks in the plaster.

These were some of the oddities. The hospital still is filled. The scenes of destruction still are left. No one knows much about tornadoes except they come and are gone, and no one knows from whence they come nor where they go. The spirit of Albany remains the dominant note of the tragedy.

The field trials for which Albany is famous, are going on: life goes on. People are planning for a better city, a better future.

Each Mind Accepts the Fragment Of Truth It Is Able To Understand

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

When in boyhood I first became interested in religion, I could not understand why it was necessary for Christ to die. Was God so angry at mankind that some blood sacrifice was necessary to satisfy His hard justice? And how could it be just to have an innocent man killed for the sins of the guilty? Was it some mystery beyond human reason?

Finally I decided to take it on faith and quit thinking about it, which was intellectual dishonesty and cowardice—solving a problem, ostrich fashion, by hiding from it. Why was man given reason, if not to use it?

Years later I began to study that best-loved verse in the gospels, John 3:16: "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

So God was not prompted by anger, but by love. Because of love, He gave His Son. But why? Nothing is said about satisfying justice or paying a debt. Here it says He gave His Son for one purpose only—so that, if people would believe in Him, they might be saved.

That was clear enough. Belief in Christ would save people; but why, then, did He have to die?

To use a present-day illustration, it is possible to imagine an American of German descent who loves the people of Germany and wishes to save them from the tyranny of Nazism. To that end he sends his only son to tell the German people the truth that is hidden from them. Both father and son know the truth must be told to the people quickly, for the son will certainly be arrested and killed when Nazi authorities learn what he is doing. The son

Finns' Status Is Desperate, Not Hopeless, Says Writer

MacKenzie Declares Aid May Come From France, Britain or Sweden.

By DEWITT MacKENZIE, Associated Press Staff Writer. Finland's iron-men have continued to do the impossible in holding off the Red flood, but the invaders are pressing hard on the defenders' right flank, where lies the strategically important city of Viipuri.

True, the Finns report the destruction of a Russian division of 18,000 men northeast of Lake Ladoga. But we heard about that unofficially a couple of weeks ago, and the present delayed announcement looks like a brave and timely move to inspire the public and keep the Finnish flag high.

The best we can say at the moment is that the position of the Finns is desperate but not hopeless. The question of whether outside aid still can reach them in time falters on the lips.

Finland's grand old man, Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim, commander-in-chief, set the world a sporting example of fortitude and good will in his latest order of the day. In calling upon his weary little army for further sacrifice he says:

"From abroad there already has come aid to considerable extent, and it is coming continually. Soldiers of Finland, we must stand without faltering, the development of the situation gives us every possibility of victory."

No complaint against friends who haven't seen the aid he needs. He's grateful for the little assistance which has arrived—and he thinks Finland can hold out.

100,000 Troops Needed. One wonders whether the marshal really believes his boys can make the grade unless help comes quickly. He needs a hundred thousand trained soldiers immediately, with more to come, to relieve his tired troops, and thus far he has received a few thousand volunteers. He needs many airplanes with pilots, as well as guns and mountains of munitions.

Maybe the Baron thinks help will arrive in time—and perhaps it will. But his order of the day indicates that one of the shrewdest military brains of the time regards the situation as grave.

The Bolshevik attack grows in weight, as men are flung into battle with Napoleonic abandon. They have thrust forward against the Mannerheim line until they are almost at the gates of Viipuri. If

PLUMBER CHARGES 'PERSECUTION' HERE

Roy W. Reeves Jr. Obtains Temporary Order Restraining Inspectors.

Charging certain plumbing inspectors had singled him out as a target for persecution, Roy W. Reeves Jr., doing business as the A. A. Plumbing Company, 44 Piedmont avenue, yesterday won a temporary order restraining attaches of the city plumbing inspector's office from making cases against his helpers.

The temporary injunction, signed by Judge John Humphries, of Fulton Superior Court, was directed against E. Q. Quarles, chief city plumbing inspector.

The petition set out that because of the recent ice storm which played havoc with plumbing, the plaintiff hired many helpers to assist licensed plumbers in meeting calls, but that the helpers, in compliance with the city code, did no actual plumbing work.

Despite this, the suit sets out, certain plumbing inspectors have made one case against a helper and are threatening to prosecute the management, while other concerns in the same position are not molested.

Hearing on the petition for a permanent injunction has been set for March 1.

that city falls, it will tend to open the way for the Reds to sweep down on the defenders from the northern side of Lake Ladoga, rendering the wonderful line valueless.

The immediate military help which Finland so sorely needs must come from one or more of four sources—Sweden, Norway, Britain, and France. All these countries have been sending some aid, but the fact that the two Scandinavian states are trying desperately to maintain their neutrality in the war between Germany and the Anglo-French Allies has prevented wholesale assistance.

Swedish Position. The only way the Allies could get official military aid to Finland would be through Norway and Sweden, sort of sending troops way up north to Finland's arctic port of Petsamo. Sweden not only has refused a request from Finland for military aid, but has declined to allow passage of Allied forces.

Neither Scandinavian country is really prepared for more than home defense. They fear that if the Germans cut loose on them, they would be crushed before the Anglo-French Allies could bring aid.

This is the Scandinavian side of the story. This, too, gives the Allies a logical if not satisfactory explanation for not rushing more aid to the Finns.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE WOMAN IS INDICTED SAID TO SEEK BEST ON BURGLARY COUNT

Calls for Progress and Unfoldment, Judge Samuel Greene Says Here.

"Christian Science is calling for the highest and best that is in men—is calling for progress and unfoldment," Judge Samuel V. Greene declared in a lecture on Christian Science last night at the O'Keefe Junior High school.

As the individual is aroused to better thinking, better living, better health, better morals, he gradually sees more of God's presence and power and expects a more practical manifestation of this power, until he can indeed realize something of Mrs. Eddy's vision when she says (Science and Health, p. 557), "Divine Science rolls back the clouds of error with the light of Truth, and lifts the curtain on man as never born and as never dying, but as co-existent with his creator," Judge Greene said.

Judge Greene is a member of the board of trustees of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ Scientist, Boston.

The Atlanta Kiwanis Club was congratulated yesterday on reaching its 22nd birthday by Bennett O. Knudson, president of the Kiwanis International, who was one of the honor guests and principal speaker at a luncheon at the Ansley hotel.

More than 200 persons attended the anniversary luncheon, including Kiwanians from other cities, and the presidents of the other Atlanta civic clubs.

Mr. Knudson, in outlining the program for the international organization for 1940, urged that the principles of democracy be maintained. "We must not be an unthinking and unresponsive people," he declared, and added praise for the Atlanta club work being done by the members for underprivileged children.

Faber A. Bollinger, president of the local club, and George A. Giese, immediate past president, presented Carl E. Endicott and Henry Heinz, both past presidents of Kiwanis International who are members of the local club.

The Shorter College Sextet, which came to Atlanta from Rome furnished songs for the program.

Officials, spectators and players hunted high and low. Five minutes later Snyder found the tooth himself.

Play was resumed, but the Dairymen lost to the NYA, 24-20.

Bombproofs for Horses, Pigs Built Behind Finnish Lines

By WILLIAM L. WHITE

SOMEWHERE IN FINLAND—(By Mail.)—So now that we have walked along the front lines, looking at the Russian wire, the Russian dead and smashed Russian tanks over the sand bag frontiers of Finland, we are on our way back to our cars, walking down the long, winding, shallow communications trench, pressing against its sides to make way for a passing file of soldiers approaching us—we see their white-daubed steel helmets bobbing up and down in a long snake dance, following the trench pattern.

But before we walk on to the waiting cars—the dusk of the short arctic day is already noticeable—the bluff and hearty major who is conducting us wants to show us around. He takes us 50 yards off in the forest to view his battalions.

They stop eating to look at us with big liquid trusting eyes. A full meter of dirt and logs is on the roof over them, explains the major proudly, proof against anything but a direct hit.

But the major has still more wonders. Not far away is a shallow bombproof—(we must stoop to look in)—for pigs; and as we do so they all squeal joyfully at once, in a frenzy of expectation and aroused appetites. This, the big major explains with pride, is so his boys may always be sure of having fresh pork in their stew, no matter how often Russians machine gun and bomb the supply roads.

His battalion also has its own cows which give the boys plenty of fresh milk, but these are kept still further back from the lines, since it was found that a shell bursting nearby often puts a cow off her feed from fright, and her milk suffers.

So we go back down the road and get into our cars, white-painted, of course, and hidden under trees from planes, feeling that this has all been most educational but maybe just a little on the dull side.

Because after all, no one has been nipped by a bullet, and although we dived down into snowbanks a couple of dozen times, none of the big ones had landed near enough to us to make it really interesting. Or so we thought as our car doors slammed and we started off on what even the cautious major conceded was a safe road—journalists up here are handled like cut glass chandeliers—toward our billets.

EXCLUSIVE

most serious tragedy—a straw-roofed shed which covers the bodies of eight horses. A Russian shrapnel burst just over it, killing every one. These stocky little horses drew the sledges which bring hot kettles of army stew, barrels of bread and ammunition up from the rear to the front lines.

But it shall never happen again, the major explains, and leads us a few yards away. Here is a dug-out for horses, a good meter of dirt over the top of it, complete with mangers, feed-boxes, and the sweet steamy breath of the shaggy animals.

First in the Hearts of its Countrymen

YOU don't have to look farther than the nearest parking lot to see how the public has taken to this 1940 Buick.

Although it is not the largest seller, polls of public opinion mark it clearly as the car "first in the hearts of its countrymen."

On general appearance, for instance, Buick gets better than a 19% vote as best-looking, to 11% for the Number Two car.

Its thrifty Dynaflex power plant, now balanced after assembly, gives it twice as many Best-of-the-Bunch votes as any other, as does its chassis construction.

With soft and easy coil springs all around it's only natural that some two and a half times as many people pick Buick as best for ride. And a two to one vote on room is understandable in view of the SUPER's close-to-five-foot front seat.

But the really satisfying thing to us is the way people size up Buick's value.

Half again as many people pick

The model illustrated is the Buick Super, model 51 four-door touring sedan $1709 delivered at Flint, Mich. White sidewall tires additional.*

Buick as best buy as pick any other. And three out of five who rate Buick No. 1 say it's the value that gives it the edge.

So it's not surprising when polls show more people wanting Buick than want any other car—and when Buick's midwinter sales hit new peaks.

And shouldn't that, in turn, logically suggest: better get yours now—and be sure of having it?

GOOD MORNING By LOUIE D. NEWTON, TEXAS.

Friday night I saw something that I shall never forget—I saw Texas come together in tribute to Dr. George W. Truett. It was the largest banquet occasion I have ever seen—the most people, the longest speaker's table, the most brilliant thing of the sort I have ever seen.

President G. B. Dealey, of the Dallas Morning News, speaking for the city of Dallas—himself a most distinguished man and lately the honor guest at a dinner attended by many eminent Americans—said:

"Dallas and all Texas would at once declare Dr. Truett our first citizen and the foremost man of God in all our southwestern country."

That started the program off with the sort of word those Texans wanted spoken about the great preacher. Sixteen radio stations took the occasion out to the people in the southwest. I have already heard from quite a number of friends who listened in adjacent states to the broadcast.

President Roosevelt sent a message, as did many governors, senators and religious leaders, clergy and laymen. There were messages from England and from the continent and from South America. I think I have not in all my life seen such a pile of telegrams sent to any banquet occasion. Some of the messages were cabled and many had been sent by letter in advance.

Dr. Gordon Singleton presided. He is president of Baylor College for Women, and brother-in-law to Dr. Truett. He engineered the occasion with the touch of a master. Dr. Singleton is a Georgian, I'm glad to say.

Judge Frank Ryburn, distinguished jurist of Dallas and chairman of the board of deacons of the church which Dr. Truett had served since 1897, said:

"Dr. Truett has the shepherd heart. He knows his people and loves them, and we love him."

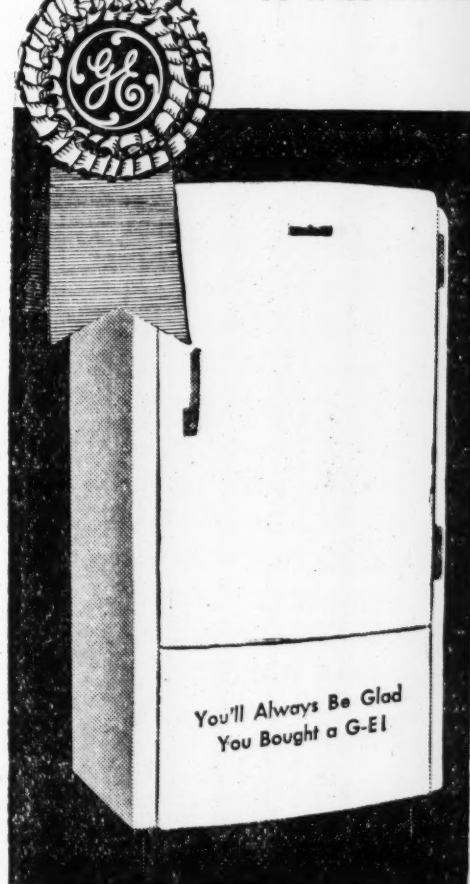

When the final call for Dr. Truett to respond to the addresses and the many gracious messages, he said:

"Thank you. And now we will think together for a few minutes about the great unfolding tomorrow—what we can do, each of us, to further the Kingdom of God."

You remember, I hope, that I told you I was going to speak of him as one who revealed the genius of selflessness. You see, in the opening sentence of his great talk the other night, that he justified the use of that phrase. More anon.

JACKETS END PRE-TOURNEY SEASON AGAINST AUBURN

All in the Game

—by Jack Troy

The "All" Myth It was a bit difficult, in the first place, to get John Mize, Georgia's National league batting champion, to talk about baseball. Football, and especially the Tech-Missouri game, interested Mize greatly. He wanted to know about Paul Christman's showing.

"Well, the movies showed that Tech's lightweight half-back, Johnny Bosch, was better."

"That's what I'd heard," said Johnny Mize, who's spending a few days here before going to Florida for spring training with the Cardinals. "I've wondered about that Christman making so many All-America teams. You see, I watched him play and I didn't quite get it."

"Maybe the answer is the publicity he got in New York. You know, a fellow can do something outstanding in the big town and go on top. Just one real performance makes him."

"Christman was a standout in the N. Y. U. game. Somebody wrote, 'The Violets are glad that Christman comes but once a year.'"

"But I didn't think he was so great in certain other games. He largely was a passer, not a great runner. And it might seem funny talk coming from a fellow who plays baseball in St. Louis, Mo., but I imagine there were any number of backs in the country who were greater."

"The old publicity in the big town is mighty powerful. For, apparently, one good game in New York against a mediocre N. Y. U. team made Paul Christman an All-America."

He's Heard Johnny Mize said he had heard from a reliable source that Wally Moses, the Vidalia, Ga., outfielder, will be traded by the Athletics to the Detroit Tigers before the season opens.

"Wally was supposed to go in that trade for McCoy, which was cancelled. I hear that the A's are in need of a pitcher and that they are going to trade Moses for one."

"The grapevine also carries another piece of news. It's more or less common talk in some places that the Detroit Tigers really are paying that $45,000 bonus to Benny McCoy. The idea is that they'll get Moses. They need an outfielder like him. And the A's will get that pitcher in return."

About Pepper There is no curbing Pepper Martin, the old Wild Hoss of the Osage, Mize revealed. "In spite of his advancing years, Pepper has a lot of energy he can't control."

"For instance, he might even work his garden all morning before showing up at the ball park. And then he will do handstands or vault over trunks in the dressing room. He's a Card in every sense of the word."

"He always has to be doing something. He's a great old warrior, the Pepper. And he'd probably do a lot better on the ball field, even now, if he would save some of his energy for the field. He just doesn't seem to think about protecting himself."

"Uncle Sunkel" Tom Sunkel is going to be given a chance in spring training. He virtually has lost sight in the left eye, because of a cataract, but still is a good prospect.

"It would be a lot better for Sunkel, a fine fellow, if it were his right eye instead of the left. He has a world of stuff but his control isn't so good. He doesn't seem to know where he's letting the ball go."

"It wasn't uncommon for him to throw the ball behind batters late in the season. And for that reason and also as a measure to protect him, Manager Blades didn't use him the last month."

"Apparently they're hoping the other eye will acquire the strength to give him better vision. If it does, he might be a regular. If it doesn't, he'll probably be farmed out. He can see all right, understand, but he can't always tell where he's going to throw the ball."

Ferdinand If Adolph Rupp were a DANE, he would automatically become the "Dizzy Dane" of basketball. . . . A real sideshow at any game in which the Kentucky team is involved is provided by the Wildcat coach. . . . He directs play vocally from the bench, against all the rules, and gets away with it. . . . Once, however, BEN CHAPMAN called a technical foul on Rupp for coaching from the sidelines. . . . And when Rupp protested, Chapman said, "If you'd spend your time coaching your team during the week you wouldn't have to do it on Saturday night." . . .

TECH IS FAVORED TO WIN TONIGHT ON TIGER COURT

Mundorff, Entire Squad Depart for Plains at Noon Today.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY. Georgia Tech's unpredictable sophomores will ring down the curtain on their 1940 basketball season in Auburn tonight against Ralph Jordan's Tigers. The game will start at 7:30 o'clock.

Because of their 53-to-31 victory over the Tigers in the first meeting of the two schools this season, the Techs will be favored to make it two straight. However, Auburn will be playing on her home court and has shown definite improvement in recent games.

The Jackets, surprise winners over Kentucky Monday night, evidently are at their peak for the season. They handled the ball with glued fingers and shot with deadly accuracy against the Wildcats to rack up their sixth conference victory in 11 starts.

TIGERS ANXIOUS. On the other hand, the Tigers will be in no peaceful mood when they take the court against the Jackets. They played their worst game of the season against Tech in the first game and will be out to redeem themselves.

The Tech team will leave Atlanta this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock. Coach Roy Mundorff will take his entire squad.

Mundorff will stick to his five iron men against the Tigers. Captain Walter Hayrans, Boneyard Johnson, Jim Hughes, Carlton Lewis and Charlie Burroughs played every minute of the Kentucky game and, if things are as close as they are likely to be, they may go all the way tonight.

Auburn will start J. P. Streetman and Bob Dickinson or Frank Manai at forwards. Shag Hawkins at center, and Ray Gibson and John Huff at guards.

SEMI-FINAL GAME. The game is the season's semi-final for the Tigers, who will close the season Saturday night against Florida.

Field Goals and Foul Shots: Latest to pick Georgia's romping Bulldogs to win the conference tournament is Roy Mundorff. . . . He says there just "ain't much you can do about those one-handed shots of Chas. Kikland and Kelly. . . . Roy also tips that the Bulldogs will beat Tennessee 10 points in Athens Saturday night. . . . All of which is probably bad news for Elmer Lampe, because last year was the first time a tourney favorite won since prohibition.

Eddie Cameron, Duke coach, is in favor of adopting a standard basketball for use all over the country, just as in football. . . . It seems the Southern conference uses a ball with seven pounds of pressure and the S. E. C. has one with 13 pounds. . . . Naturally, it is a bit tough on the visiting team. . . . It was only recently that a uniform football was adopted. . . . Previously you would play with one that resembled an egg this Saturday and one looking like a loaf of bread the next.

Don't overlook S. U. in the tournament. . . . The Tigers are likely to be tough. . . . especially with Paul Brotherton on the firing line. . . . Good news for Alabama opponents next year is that George Prather will graduate in June. . . . Other seniors on the Tide squad are Hudson, Roberson, Stone and Busby.

J. P. C. BATTLES CHICOPEE FIVE

Victory number 19 will be the object of Coach Slaton Laney's squad as the Progressives battle Chicopee Mills of Gainesville, here tonight. The main game will begin at 8:45, following the preliminary, which is slated to start at 7:15 o'clock.

The Progressives had a scare Sunday night, coming close to losing a game they should have captured easily, and no doubt Laney has had his squad drilling overtime to correct faults plainly visible against the Birmingham Boys' Club.

Steve Browdy has apparently snapped out of his slump, for the lanky center is hitting the basket with regularity again. The sparkling play of Hyman Katz and Ben Browdy have been regular features. Greenberg has been setting up crisp shots with timely tosses to teammates breaking for the basket, but on the whole the team's passing has been miserable lately. Wild heaves have cost J. P. C. possession of the ball numerous times.

Laney will again start Ben Browdy and Hyman Katz at forward; Steve Browdy, center, and Ginsberg and Greenberg, guards.

Washington Seminary defeated the alumni basketball team, 13-10, Tuesday afternoon on the Seminary court.

Anderson, Ryan, Burge and Suydam To Be Worked Extra Week in Spring

IT LOOKED LIKE FOOTBALL when Al Butcherus, Northwestern forward, stopped Jack Dawson, Ohio State guard, with a neat shoe-string tackle. Dawson had the ball tucked under his arm as though headed for a touchdown. Other players are Jack Graf (8) and Bill Sattler (3), of Ohio State, and Don Clawson (24) and Dick Klein (25), of Northwestern. Ohio State won, 58-52.

The Sportlight

By GRANTLAND RICE. (Released by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 20.—Few people among the side-line or non-combatant contingent of sport, including over 3,000,000 golfers, appreciate the toughest scramble now taking place in competition. This scramble involves the job of finishing in the money among the leading golf pros. of the United States. Their 7,000-mile trek from Florida to California, now back to Florida again via Arizona and Texas and Louisiana, finds them facing $10,000 in prize money at New Orleans this week, where the job of eating and sleeping under a roof is no minor consideration to more than a few. The New Orleans $10,000 show is one of the high spots and the hot spots of the year.

The head-on collision from the deep south gives such money winners as Jimmy Demaret, Eddie Oliver, Lawson Little, Clayton Heafner, Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and one or two others a big chance to build up the bank-roll. They, already, have money in the bank. But there are a hundred others who have broken or come close to par without collecting a dime—and they can use a few dollars on their way to the big four-ball tournament at Miami in early March.

The New Orleans and the Miami shows must be listed among golf's headlines. They are two magnificent competitions where class runs many deep, and where human drama has quite a story to tell.

The Deeper Punishment. What sport brings the greater punishment? Tommy Armour, the Silver Scot of golf, happens to be a World War veteran and one of the closest and keenest followers of boxing, football and baseball that I know.

Armour, winner of both the United States and British open, also the P. G. A. has the type of brain to cover broader fields. "When it comes to taking punishment," Armour told me, "there isn't even an argument. The answer is golf. Some one fights Joe Louis and is probably knocked out in a few rounds. He only has to absorb physical punishment for a short while. Physical punishment is one of the minor ailments. Firpo was knocked down 7 or 8 times by Jack Dempsey and less than an hour later was the same as ever, having a big night in a cafe."

"Golf is different. The physical part is a minor matter. The suffering in golf belongs to nerves—and also to the brain attempting to concentrate. It is like having a nerve pulled from a tooth. In golf you take this beating from four to eight hours a day during a big tournament. This is actual suffering, when things are not breaking correctly. Any one can take a physical beating. Any cow—a dumb, stupid animal. That's no test of courage. Courage has little to do with the physical side. It has almost everything to do with the nerves and the mental side."

"It takes no bravery or real courage to be knocked down and get up again. You know even the worm will turn—if you step on him. But to force yourself to battle against jumpy nerves and a stale mental state in golf calls for more real courage than Joe Louis or Jack Dempsey or any other fighter ever had to show. Golf calls for the courage of the civilized human being—not the human animal."

Vols, Bulldogs and Tide Are Tough Defensively

By DON WHITEHEAD. KNOXVILLE, Ga., Feb. 20.—The topsy-turvy Southeastern Conference basketball race is reversing the old sports adage—"a good offense is the best defense."

Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama, three of the four first defensive clubs in the conference, have proved the best way to stop the free-scoring boys is not to remove the backboards or slow up the game, but to slap a tight defense on them.

The proof is in the fact this trio was leading the league race at the far-end of a hectic season which has produced no dominant favorite for the tournament opening here February 29.

Kentucky's Wildcats have been the exception in this defense record. Although boasting tight defense, the Cats have dropped into ninth place in the standings.

SACRIFICE DEFENSE. Strangely enough, none of the top-scoring outfits such as Auburn, Mississippi State, Florida and Mississippi is among the conference leaders. Apparently these teams gained offensive power at the expense of defense and the sacrifice wasn't enough to turn the tide.

Tennessee, tied with Georgia for the league lead, has been the best defensive club, permitting an average of only 26 points per game. And yet the Volunteers have been the poorest offensive team in the league excepting Sewanee, scoring an average of only 30.8 per game in conference play.

The offensive superiority of Georgia and Alabama over Tennessee, statistically speaking, is shown to be offset by an almost exact ratio of defensive inferiority.

BETTER SCORERS. Georgia has an eight-point per game advantage in scoring over Tennessee, but Tennessee holds an eight-point superior defense. Alabama has an offensive six points per game better than Tennessee, but the Tide's defense is six points poorer.

Mississippi State has rolled up a scoring average of 47.1 points per game, but a porous defense has permitted the opposition to register 45.7 points per game. In each case, the high-scoring quintets show a corresponding loss in defensive potency.

For illustration, following is a tabulation of each team's conference record of average points per game and the average number of points scored by the opposition, with teams listed according to conference standing as of Monday night:

TEAM	AB.	OPP.
Tennessee	30.8	26
Georgia	38.1	34.3
Alabama	36.5	32.6
L. S. U.	38.7	36.6

Hamlin collected a similar bonus last season, when he won 20 and lost 13.

Signing of Hamlin, who immediately took part in his first workout, brought all of the Dodger pitchers and catchers into line.

SCOTT IS ELECTED SOUTHERN FIELD TRIAL PRESIDENT

THREE POINTERS STAR IN ALL-AGE RACE AT ALBANY

Jake's Seaview Missy, Ichauway's Goldie, Seabright Boy Favored.

ALBANY, Ga., Feb. 20.—Major Trammell Scott, of Atlanta, tonight was elected president of the Southern Amateur Field Trial Club, succeeding Bob Sealy.

Scott also is president of the Regional, which will be run off following the conclusion of the Amateur all-age event tomorrow morning.

The popular Atlanta, president of the Southern Association of Base-ball Clubs, heads up a splendid organization in the Southern Amateur. Other officers named to-night included Hollis Lanier, Albany, vice president, and Hudson Malone, Albany, secretary-treasurer.

Added to the board of directors were Bob Sealy, Richard Tift and Dwight Ellis, the latter two of Albany.

With two braces to be run in the morning before the amateur all-age stake is completed, three dogs stand out as favorites among the gallery.

All three are pointers. They are Jake's Seaview Missy, Tampa, Fla., entry; Ichauway's Goldie, owned by Bob Woodruff, and Seabright Boy.

A brisk, icy wind slowed the pace of the all-age stake of the Southern amateur trials today. Birds were plentiful, however, on the beautiful, well-stocked preserve of L. D. Johnson's Wildfair plantation.

The trials, exceeding fondest hopes of officials both as to entries and performances, have attracted a large gallery.

Decatur Wins Pair From Russell High

Decatur swept a double-header basketball program with Russell High last night, the girls winning, 41 to 20, and the boys, 23 to 17.

The Decatur girls staged a sensational last-half rally to win their game. Trailing 23 to 14 at intermission, they came back and, led by Dukehart and Boswell, who scored 18 and 17 points, respectively, won by a safe margin.

DIZ'S MOTHER DIES. WIGGINS, Miss., Feb. 20.—(P)—Funeral services were conducted in Bohd, Miss., for Mrs. Sarah Rachel Nash, 72, mother of Mrs. Jerome (Dizzy) Dean, the baseball player. Dean and his wife were here for the funeral.

That's the only time Adolph Rupp was at a loss for words... George GRIFFIN, Tech's track coach, supplies the information that Georgia Tech has beaten Kentucky more than ten times in basketball... Surprising, isn't it? Tech's sensational sophomores were not at their best against Duke, although winning, but they really put on a spectacle against the Wildcats... They were red-hot... Carleton LEWIS is one of the smoothest-performing sophomores seen around here in a long, long time... Harley McCOLLUM, Tulane's junior All-America tackle, has flunked out of school... And Jarrin' John KIMBROUGH, Texas A. & M.'s All-America back, just made the scholastic grade by the skin of a pigskin... If Dutch DEHNERT hadn't held out at Atlanta basketball fans, there would have been a chance to hear a new Vincent LOPEZ warbler when the Celtics were here... Jimmy BROWN, ex-Temple star, saw little basketball action here, and all the time he could have entertained the crowd from the bench... He revealed his talents recently in New Orleans... Ernie ALLEN's basketball play here with Kentucky indicated that he still is one of the most promising football players at the Wildcat school... His tackle of Walter Haymans, Tech captain, was made to order for the gridiron... They're saying now that organized baseball ought to declare Judge LANDIS a free agent.

LONG AND THE SHORT—The basketball team from West Point, Ga., was beaten, 44-43, last night in the state tournament at Fulton High gym, but in Mike Gore (left) the West Pointers have probably the tallest player in the south.

He stands six feet, eleven and one-half inches tall and handles himself remarkably well. In the center is Bill Baker, who measures six feet, five inches. The team's midget is Harty Bishop (right), five feet eight inches.

Three Quintets Win One-Point Verdicts

Clayton, Royston, Fort Benning and Lithonia Advance in State Cage Meet.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

For plain and fancy basketball, sheer, thrilling, hair-raising close decisions you must hand it to the second annual Georgia state cage tournament as it roared into the semi-finals last night at the Fulton High gym.

The large crowd saw every Atlanta entry beaten, and every favored five bite the dust. It saw three of four games won by one-point margins. It saw a one-handed foul shooter who never missed, last-minute goal shots from center, and it saw Jewell Woody, of West Point, sink 16 points in the first 10 minutes of play, though his team finally lost.

In the furious milling Clayton defeated West Point, 44-43, after the Pointers led all the way. Royston "snuk in" a last 30-second basket to nip the Crimson Bulldogs, 40-39. Fort Benning eked out Sears-Roebuck, 30-29, and Lithonia dragged the Ivy Drugists, 35-23, when the Drugists couldn't make their shots good.

It would take reams of copy to relate all the evening's thrills. Suffice it to say Jewell Woody's performance of goading 25 points for the losing West Pointers was the night's best effort. James Ashe and F. B. Derrick, opposing him, did Herculean duty for Clayton with 16 and 13 counters, respectively.

The hardy, rangy Clayton Mountaineers will take on the Benning outfit tonight in the semi-finals after Royston and Lithonia have battled it out in the 8 o'clock curtain raiser. If they are half as tough as last night there will be two great scraps.

BURKEMO WINS. PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 20.—(P)—Walter Burkemo, of Chicago, south Florida amateur golf tournament medalist with a 67, was forced to the last green before eking out a one-up victory today over W. B. Langford Jr., of Chicago, in the first round of match play. Burkemo slipped to a 78 but still managed to out Langford.

Smithies Top Cadet Quint By 45 to 23

Pounds Leads Scorers With 20 Points; Long Shots Win Game.

Tech High defeated G. M. A., 45 to 23, Tuesday afternoon at College Park, retained its leadership in the Big Seven basketball race and left Boys' High-Tech High game Thursday night on the Henry Grady court to determine the league championship.

Playing its best game of the year for half of the game and trailing by two points going into the last half, G. M. A. couldn't keep up its fast pace and scored only seven points, while the Smithies scored 27 points during the same period.

Tech High started the game with a wild scoring spree, sinking four field goals in rapid succession from long range. It was the first time this season the Smithies had played a long-shooting game and was continued through most of the first half.

Leading 18 to 16 going into the last half, Tech High changed its tactics, played cautiously and did not take any long chances, working the ball well under the baskets before attempting to shoot.

Little Jack Pounds was the big offensive hero. He scored 20 points, because of his ability to speed past the Cadet guards.

TWO PREP FIVES TIED FOR LEAD IN 'BIG 7' LEAGUE

G. M. A., Aggies Battle Today at 4 O'Clock at College Park.

Monroe's Aggies will play G. M. A. at 4 o'clock this afternoon on the College Park court in a practice game, preparatory to next week's G. I. A. tournament at Columbus, Ga.

Monroe defeated Commercial in a free scoring game last week on the Henry Grady court in their first appearance here this season. Today's game will be the last for the Aggies before the tournament.

G. M. A., after a slow start in the Big Seven race, scoring only 13 points in the first game, has shown more progress than any other team with the possible exception of Boys' High.

The Cadets have lost some four or five games this season by less than four points. G. M. A. lost two games to Spartanburg High by five points combined.

GIANT AGGIES. Monroe has one of the tallest teams in the state, with only Hyder, a veteran guard, being less than six feet tall. Lance and Forbes, two members of the football squad, are outstanding on the Aggie squad.

All Atlanta's prep basketball interest is now centered about the game Thursday night between Tech High and Boys' High at 8 o'clock on the Henry Grady court.

The championship of the Big Seven race hangs in the balance, for a Boys' High defeat will leave the Purples clear out of the race with Tech High and Columbus still in the running.

THREE-WAY TIE LOOMS. A Tech High victory Thursday will give the Smithies an inside track, with Columbus' game Friday determining whether the race will end in a two-way tie with Columbus and Tech High leading or give Tech High the undisputed right of way.

G. M. A. plays Columbus in Friday's closing game.

DOWN THE ALLEYS — Miss Virginia Saxon filed the first entry for the Metropolitan Atlanta Individual Women's Championships that will be rolled on the uptown Lucky Strike and downtown Black's Bowling Center drives this Saturday afternoon and evening. A $250 entry fee includes the cost of the nine games to be bowled in separate three-game blocks at 2, 3:30 and 7:30 o'clock.

Ruby Towns, of the Ladies' Amateur league, won the first prize in the women's event of the handicap sweepstakes with a five-game total of 589. Joan Thompson, of the Ladies' Commercial league, was runner-up with a 588 count. Lucy Love, of the Ladies' Amateur league, was third with 572 and Lois Pendergrass and B. Murphy tied for fourth place with 555 each.

J. D. (Penny) Pendergrass, of the Gate City league, was clipping the pins merrily as he turned in a fine series of 676 in winning the first prize in the men's sweepstakes. J. P. Burnett was runner-up with 636 and Walter Bryan had 613 for third place. Just out of the "money" was Charlie Wright, with 612.

Hunter continued to boost his soaring average in the Southern bowling league Saturday evening as he turned in the top single game of 124 and had other games of 121 and 108 for a top series of 353.

Alabama Defeats Mississippi State TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Feb. 20.—(P)—Alabama knocked off Mississippi State, 34-26, here tonight in the first of three games in four days. The Tidesmen close the season at Starkville, Miss., Friday in a return battle with State, meeting Ole Miss at Oxford in the interim.

The game was rough, with 29 fouls called. Three men left the floor for excessive fouling.

Badminton Champion Beats Zaharko Here Jack Purcell, world's badminton champion, defeated Joe Zaharko, 5-15, 15-12, 15-14 in the feature match of an exhibition program at the Georgia Tech gym last night.

In the opening match, Haygood Clark and Ted Zuber defeated Stewart McGinty and Dr. Parks McGinty, 15-6.

Purcell and Dr. McGinty defeated Zuber and Zaharko, 10-15, 15-11 and 15-12 in the doubles main event. Then Purcell and Zaharko defeated Clark and Zuber, 15-4 and 15-6.

Purcell also played a match against Stewart McGinty and Clark, winning, 15-7.

Jim Homer Scores 43 Against Typists COLUMBUS, Ga., Feb. 20.—(P) Captain Jim Homer, Columbus High's 6 feet, 5 inch center, tonight tossed in 43 points to lead his Blue Devil teammates to a 75-24 conquest of Commercial High school in a Big Seven league game.

The lanky star boosted his season's total to 406 for 21 games. Displaying spectacular form, Homer sank 20 of 31 field goal attempts.

Monroe defeated Commercial in a free scoring game last week on the Henry Grady court in their first appearance here this season. Today's game will be the last for the Aggies before the tournament.

G. M. A., after a slow start in the Big Seven race, scoring only 13 points in the first game, has shown more progress than any other team with the possible exception of Boys' High.

The Cadets have lost some four or five games this season by less than four points. G. M. A. lost two games to Spartanburg High by five points combined.

GIANT AGGIES. Monroe has one of the tallest teams in the state, with only Hyder, a veteran guard, being less than six feet tall. Lance and Forbes, two members of the football squad, are outstanding on the Aggie squad.

All Atlanta's prep basketball interest is now centered about the game Thursday night between Tech High and Boys' High at 8 o'clock on the Henry Grady court.

The championship of the Big Seven race hangs in the balance, for a Boys' High defeat will leave the Purples clear out of the race with Tech High and Columbus still in the running.

THREE-WAY TIE LOOMS. A Tech High victory Thursday will give the Smithies an inside track, with Columbus' game Friday determining whether the race will end in a two-way tie with Columbus and Tech High leading or give Tech High the undisputed right of way.

G. M. A. plays Columbus in Friday's closing game.

CITY WILL PETITION FOR REHEARING IN FAIR-WATER CASE

Southeastern Association Directors Expected To Study Ruling Calling for Atlanta To Collect.

The city's legal staff yesterday prepared to petition for a rehearing of a Georgia supreme court ruling that the city must collect for water provided the Southeastern Fair Association, lessees of Lake-wood park, Edwin L. Sterne, assistant city attorney, said he was exploring the legal possibilities.

Meantime, Mike Benton, president of the fair association, declined to become concerned over the outcome, saying association directors probably will meet some time this week to consider the ruling, but indicating that they will await final determination of the action before attempting to set a course.

W. Zode Smith, general manager of waterworks, said he reports to council annually the amount of water provided for the park and that council heretofore has accepted and filed the reports.

Under the court order, it was assumed that the association may be called on to pay water bills amounting to approximately $2,300 a year since the contract was entered into in 1924, but Sterne and attaches of the city attorney's office appeared to be prepared to contend that provision of free water was a "consideration" of the contract under which the city is to receive in fee simple all physical improvements made by the association at the park during the life of the lease.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellings' All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy, toasted cereal regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellings' in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

HUTCHESON PAID TRIBUTE BY COURT

Brief Memorial Services Held by Justices and Members of Bar.

Quietly and simply, members of the Georgia supreme court and the legal profession yesterday paid tribute to the late John Bell Hutcheson, an associate justice of the supreme court from 1934 until 1938.

Intimate friends of Justice Hutcheson attended the brief memorial services which were held in the courtroom at the state capital, Judge Hugh M. Dorsey, chairman of the memorial committee, presided.

Reuben R. Arnold, who gave the committee's report, declared: "He had that experience which, with his quality of practical judgment and correct intuitions, enabled him justly and quickly to size up a legal situation and arrive at the right result."

Judge Edgar Watkins summed up the justice's service on the war draft board, and declared "he had and deserved the respect and affection of all who knew him."

Judge O. J. Cogler, of Jonesboro, paid tribute to his "loyal interest in youth."

Associate Justice Samuel C. Atkinson, responded for the high court. Of his former co-worker, he said:

"As a lawyer and judge he employed feeling as well as thought." Others on the program included B. D. Murphy, of Fayetteville, who also read a letter from Judge Price Gilbert, former member of the court, and Judge Lucien Goodrich, of Griffin.

Justice Hutcheson was appointed January 22, 1934, by Governor Talmadge, to fill the office made vacant by the death of Justice Hiram Warner Hill. He was elected to fill the unexpired term in the fall of 1934. He retired in 1938.

F. D. R. IS CHARGED WITH PARTY UPSET

Colorado Senator Flays His Silence; Election Probers Seek More Funds.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—(P)—Senator Johnson, Democrat, Colorado, accused President Roosevelt today of "demoralizing the Democratic party" by failure to make known his intentions in regard to a third term. Johnson has been boosting Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, for the Democratic nomination.

"The President will be drafted unless in a most vigorous manner he makes it perfectly clear to the American people that he will decline the nomination," Johnson said in a statement. "If it be his intention in the final analysis to submit to draft, his present attitude of silence is smart politics. If, on the other hand, the President has no intention of accepting the nomination, his continued silence is terrible and he must accept the full responsibility for demoralizing and disrupting the Democratic party."

Meanwhile it was learned that the special senate committee assigned to police the elections plans to ask for $75,000, convinced that the $30,000 allotted will not be enough to finance an adequate investigation.

Senator Gillette, Democrat, Iowa, is chairman of the committee. In addition to checking up on expenditures for elections to the senate, the committee also must investigate campaigns for the presidency and vice presidency. It will watch presidential primaries, selection of delegates to the presidential nominating conventions, and the November elections.

CLARKS HILL PLANS TAKE NEW COURSE

Hydroelectric Proposal Will Be Placed in 'Mived' River, Harbor Bill.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—The proposed Clarks Hill $28,000,000 hydroelectric and navigation project on the Savannah river, just north of Augusta, Ga., will be placed in a "mixed" river and harbor bill, if the senate committee on commerce has its way, it developed today at an executive meeting of that body.

At the suggestion of Chairman Bailey, of North Carolina, a subcommittee, headed by Senator Sheppard, of Texas, will cut the Rivers and Harbors Bill, passed by the house during the last regular session, into four separate measures: (1) For navigation projects; (2) For power projects; (3) For flood projects, and (4) For mixed projects.

Present at today's meeting of the full committee were Senators Walter F. George and Richard B. Russell, of Georgia; Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Representative Paul Brown, of Elberton, Ga., and Representative Hare, who represents the South Carolina district in which part of the Clarks Hill development would be located. All five congressmen strongly urged passage of a bill containing the Clarks Hill project at this session of the congress.

Opportunity School Points Way for New State Training

It's Poorly Equipped, But Is Nucleus for Great System, Which Would Prepare People of Georgia for Livelihood, Fill Business Needs.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

(Yesterday Georgia's needs in vocational education other than agriculture and home economics were pointed out and a plan for a state system of vocational schools, located in the great industrial centers was discussed. Today the Atlanta Opportunity School, its aims, needs and achievements are considered as the starting point of such a state school here.)

Too many people look upon the Atlanta Opportunity school solely as an institution where those who couldn't keep up the pace of academic education are taught to work with their hands.

That is wrong. The Atlanta Opportunity school serves four types of people. It serves those who are employed, but who need more training in order to hold their jobs.

It serves those who have had a high school education, but who have had no training for a specific job.

It serves those adults who, through technological unemployment, or in the case of many women, through loss of their means of support, must learn a new skill. It serves those problem children of the academic school—the "leavers" who quit high school or junior high to go to work, soon lose their jobs, then seek to learn some trade.

It has grown over a period of 25 years in answer to two demands. One, the demand of industry for people who are trained. Another, the demand of people themselves who feel the need of training.

It is, in the words of Major Paul S. Woodward, its director, the vocational branch of the Atlanta public school system, just as it may become, some day, one branch of a great state system of vocational education.

Its campus is the city. Its students are young and old, bright and dull, quick and laggard.

Its greatest strength is the qualifications of its teachers. Its greatest weakness is its cramped quarters and inadequate equipment, which cripple services and prevent it becoming what it could be.

For women who need its services, it lives up to its name. It offers them real opportunity—to learn millinery, power sewing, beauty culture, the technique of waiting on tables, the technique of selling behind a counter. Its courses in typing, bookkeeping, filing, business machine operation are thorough and of high standard.

To men it offers little, though there are thousands in Atlanta who need its services. It tries to teach electricity, but it has no equipment worthy of the name. It tries to teach cabinet making, carpentry, wood-working. Yet it has scant equipment for these things.

It has a tea-room where it trains waitresses, but it has no fountain and no steam-table, though trained fountain and steam-table men are in constant demand.

It needs, desperately, a trained faculty man to contact industry, to find jobs for those whose limitations are such that they never can do a skilled job.

Many burden-bearing jobs in industry require little skill. To place a man of little talent in one of these puts him in his proper niche, keeps him off relief. To try to train him for something higher is waste.

Despite its handicaps, last year it trained 165 employed people who needed further instruction if they were to hold their jobs. It trained 386 unemployed who went into employment as soon as they acquired a skill.

All around it lies a city needing better trained salespeople, electricians, machinists, carpenters, cabinetmakers, upholsterers. All around it are hundreds of people, most of them young, needing training in these lines.

It must, somehow, meet the twofold demand upon it. Perhaps the answer lies with the state—in the plan now revolving in the mind of M. D. Mobley, state director of vocational education.

That plan would establish real "opportunity" schools in every industrial center in Georgia.

It could well start with Atlanta. The nucleus is already here.

Atlanta Sub-Debs To Prove Point of Feminine Beauty

By Sally Forth.

THE idea of a visit to Annapolis is a thrill to any college belle, but an Annapolis hop, plus a date you have never seen, provides a thrill that is experienced once in a lifetime. Such a thrill awaits three popular Atlanta sub-debs, Ione Mercer, Cato Whelchel and Betty Haverly. The trio, accompanied by Catherine Tift and Dorothy Giddings and chaperoned by Mrs. Glenville Giddings, will leave Friday afternoon for the Naval Academy, with Catherine and Dorothy having the advantage of knowing in advance who their dates for the hop will be.

The dance on Saturday evening will be the annual George Washington birthday ball, you know, and the sub-debs' plans were inspired when Catherine received a letter from Fort Land, of this city, who is a "youngster," or a second-year naval student at the academy. Fort invited Catherine to attend the hop as his guest and begged her to bring several of her Atlanta friends to prove his frequently argued point concerning the beauty of girls from his home town. He promised to arrange escorts for the belles and Sally predicts that the feminine pulchritude selected to accompany Catherine will prove his point beyond the shadow of a doubt.

When your society reporter talked to lovely Catherine Tift, she was informed that Cato will have as her escort "Youngster" Shreve, of California, and that Ione will attend the festive affair with "Youngster" O'Sullivan, also of California.

Dorothy Giddings will be the guest of her California cousin, "Youngster" Bill Knapp. As for Betty Haverly, she will not know the name of her escort until she arrives, but Betty likes mysteries, so she is enthusiastically looking forward to meeting her "blind date."

The plans for the girls' entertainment have already been outlined in Fort's letter to Catherine. When the quintet of Atlanta beauties arrive on Saturday morning they will be met by their dates and will proceed immediately to the inn to change clothes, after which they will enjoy luncheon, a tour of the campus, a tea-dance, and a brilliant ball during the evening.

Early the next day the girls will attend church with their escorts in full regalia. With reluctant farewell, they will again entrain for this city, arriving in time to attend their respective classes at school.

TO HELEN RANDALL, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Randall, has come the highest honor awarded at Mt. Vernon Seminary. Helen is in her second year at the fashionable Washington school, and the honor of "Optima" comes as a reward for having been on the president's list three times in succession.

The president's list corresponds to the dean's list in other schools, and a student with an 85 to 95 scholastic average wins a place on the coveted list. Helen's name was listed for the last semester last year, and she has already attained the desired average twice this year. Congratulations are certainly in order for the popular Atlanta belle!

Helen's friends will rejoice to learn that she will arrive in Atlanta March 15 to spend the spring holidays at her home in Druid Hills. And she will bring as her guests a trio of charming schoolmates, Maudie Smyre, of Gastonia, N. C., and those adorable twin sisters, Ruth and Anne Newwhite, whom Helen visited Newport News, Va., last summer.

he foursome will be entertained at a perfect whirl of gay during their to-day visit. Under Mrs. Luther Randall's already planned a breakfast on the morning the ve, and thereafter every ment will be filled with teas, dinners and dai. planned in their honor.

IF YOU are well up on your contract bridge, you may be able to acquire your new spring ensemble at the E. Rivers P-T-A. benefit bridge this afternoon, for included in the grand array of prizes are dresses, hats and shoes of the latest mode. In fact, the prizes range all the way from a baby cap to a radio, and there are such useful and intriguing articles as luggage, china, photographs, perfume, pillows, jewelry, flowers and fruit.

And in case you are at outs with your best beloved and harbor a secret longing for single blessedness, you may even win a divorce free of charge. You see, the charming president of the Rivers P-T-A, Mrs. Alex Hitz, has a lawyer husband, and wishing to do his part for the organization, he cheerfully offered his services in the divorce court, entirely without cost to the plaintiff.

The party, which is annually one of the outstanding events of the social calendar, begins at 3 o'clock and will be held at the Piedmont Driving Club. If you are not planning to attend, you may be sure you will miss something good.

THAT was a gay and festive party given on Monday by Ann Noble when she entertained at a breakfast at her home on Avery drive. Honor guests were Ann Harris and her charming visitor, Calista Struby, of Denver, Col. It seems that Ann and Calista were classmates in a school in Florence, Italy, at the same time that Mrs. M. Rogers Noble and Ann were living in Florence. Letter written to Mrs. Noble and her daughter in the Italian language by friends they made in Florence, furnished a lot of amusement for the affair. The honor guests and the hostess learned a goodly part of the Italian language while abroad, and they had lots of fun translating the letters into English after the breakfast was over.

To further enhance the Italian atmosphere at the party, the exquisite linens and pottery, which Mrs. Noble purchased in Florence, were brought to service at the breakfast. Yellow acacia and red carnations beautified the table in the dining room and simi-

Cherry Custard Pie makes healthful, pretty dessert.

Cherry Pie Is Recommended For This Week's Celebrations

By Sally Saver.

In February we celebrate the birthdays of two national heroes, and we also celebrate cherry week. It is pleasant to celebrate these occasions because a genuine appreciation for Lincoln and Washington inspires us, and in the case of cherry week a liking for this pretty fruit.

Custards are recommended as a means of getting part of the milk quota into the diet and when you present cherry custard there'll be no problem of getting young and old to eat their share. Here's how to make it:

Cherry Custard Pie.
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1-4 cup sugar

1-4 teaspoon salt
1-2 teaspoon vanilla
1 1-2 cups milk, scalded

Line a pie plate with pie pastry and make a standing fluted rim. Combine eggs, slightly beaten, with the sugar, salt, vanilla and milk. Add one cup canned sour pitted cherries (from which the juice has been drained). Pour mixture into unbaked pie shell. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes. Then reduce heat to 350 and bake 25 to 30 minutes longer, or until custard is set.

Studio Strike Costs Actress Lots of Money

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 20.—Bette Davis says that her protegee, Jane Bryan, will come back to pictures "after the honeymoon is over." Jane recently married wealthy Justin Dart, of Chicago. I understand that Jane will make only one or two pictures a year, spending the rest of the time with her husband in Chicago. Miss Bryan would also like to do a play on Broadway, but must first get an O. K. from the Warner Brothers, to whom she is still under contract. Talking about Warner's, that little strike of Olivia de Havilland's has cost her $12,500 in salary alone. But Olivia says it was worth it to get her new understanding with the studio. She has been promised some good pictures, with the possibility of starring in Frank Capra's "Life and Death of John Doe."

Most miserable man in town is Gregory Bautzer, who was sure that one day Lana Turner would be his wife until she surprised this town by eloping with Artie Shaw. Lana met the bandmaster when both worked in "Dancing Co-Ed." She had a date with Shaw at that time—at the request of the studio—and almost broke Judy Garland's heart, who was a daily visitor to the set when Artie was in action. I remember an interview I had with Lana in which she said that she would not marry until she was definitely set as an important star. At the time, her future looked very bright. But the big pictures failed to come along. In fact, her current picture, "Two Girls on Broadway," is her first in six months. She has apparently decided that love and marriage are more important than fame, which may, or may not, come off.

Franchot Tone denies that he has invested his own money in his current play, "Hemlock." "The Gentle People," his last Broadway play. "This time," says Franchot, "I'm gambling with the other fellow's dough." Charles Laughton has bought a house in Bel-Air with the biggest swimming pool in the neighborhood. (He's a pretty big man.) Laurence Olivier wears a piece of clay on the bridge of his nose to make him look supercilious. For his "Pride and Prejudice" chore. Vivien Leigh describes Hollywood as "a holiday resort without any stability."

Do you remember the scene in "I Take This Woman" when Hedy Lamarr was to kiss Kent Taylor? It seems that Hedy did not enjoy this job very much because when the scene was being taken, she said in German, "I can't keep on kissing this man." To her surprise—and dismay, Mr. Taylor answered—in German, "Oh, can't you? Then you know what to do!" It must have been quite difficult to keep on kissing him.

Regarding "I Take This Woman," Co-star Spencer Tracy says, "It's the price I have to pay for swell pictures like 'Northwest Passage' and 'Edison, the Man'."

Baby talk. Geraldine Fitzgerald would like to have her baby born in her native Ireland. But it is too dangerous to make the trip now, so she will go to New York for the event. "I don't want him born in Hollywood," she concludes. . . . And Henry Fonda is asking

Specific Cause Of Herpes Is Unknown

By Dr. William Brady.

Herpes is an eruption of vesicles or little blisters on a red irritated base of skin or mucous membrane. Common situation is on or near the lip. Sometimes it involves one eye and the associated irritation or perhaps ulceration of the cornea is intensely painful and damaging to the sight.

The term "cold" sore is out. "Fever blister" is nearly as insignificant, for in most instances no fever accompanies herpes. When the outbreak of vesicles follows the course of a nerve the condition is called herpes zoster, or more commonly, "shingles." It may occur in the area of distribution of any nerve having a branch to the skin. Perhaps the most frequent site of herpes zoster is in the course of one of the intercostal nerves which supply the skin of the chest and abdominal wall.

Specific cause of herpes is unknown, but there is a growing belief among scientific investigators and clinicians that herpes is due to a filterable virus skin to the cause of chickenpox and that herpes is communicable, though not directly contagious—that is to say, the virus may be transmitted from one person to another in some indirect way or by some unrecognized carrier or medium.

Spirits of camphor gently and frequently sopped on at the first irritation or burning will somewhat relieve the itching and prevent the lesion from spreading. It is generally better not to break the blisters if it can be helped. But once the blisters break great care must be taken to avoid infection.

In some cases of recurring herpes of the face the victims find immediate painting with collodion of best protective and soothing application. One such sufferer with long experience told me that plain collodion is much better for this purpose than flexible.

Oils and salves or ointments are best avoided. Water or alcohol solutions may be used. A lotion composed of 1 per cent of zinc sulphate and 1 per cent of potassium sulphate in water is a standard remedy for local application. If the lesion becomes fissured it should be kept coated with compound tincture of benzoin which may be painted on several times a day.

I should advise any one who is subject to recurring herpes to take a prophylactic course of quinine twice a year, in fall and spring—that is, for an adult two grains of quinine sulphate (pill, tablet or capsule) three times a day for a month; for a child weighing 50 pounds 1 grain twice a day. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for monograph "Quinine in Modern Medicine."

Herpes zoster, zona, shingles, is another story.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Diagnosis. Could a recurrence of thyroid trouble I had treated with iodine years ago account for attacks of humping and rapid heart action? (C. R.)

Answer.—Instructions printed daily or at least frequently with this column warn readers that I do not answer letters pertaining to disease, diagnosis or treatment. In order to answer your question I should require a diagnosis of your trouble. In order to diagnose your trouble I should have to examine you. The only advice I can offer is that you should consult your physician. You asked for it, but you may take it or leave it.

Menopause. Please give us an article on care of the health at the critical epoch, and if possible some suggestion for relieving or preventing hot flashes. (MRS. B. A. E.)

Answer.—Middle age, the time of the menopause, is not a "critical" time. Send 11-2-cent stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for monograph on "The Menopause."

A Good Scolding May Renew Your Courage, Confidence

By Caroline Chatfield.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

A very dear friend of mine who has achieved great success in time past, now is on the down grade. He has lost the confidence and the assurance he used to have. This tends to make matters worse as he has to come in contact with the public to make his living. Could you give me some points on how to build up his courage and confidence? Anything you can say will be greatly appreciated.

J. F. B.

ANSWER:

When we really want to help a skidding fellow-traveler find his feet, there's no better way than to turn the problem around and ask, "What would I want of a friend under such circumstances? What would help me snap out of the slump?" There's a four-fold answer to the question as far as most of us are concerned.

First, we like to feel that the friend has a sympathetic understanding of the fix we are in. Such a sympathetic understanding that the sore subject is never openly discussed. Second, we like to have the friend talk about the ups and downs of our successes and remind us that we had the goods with the plain implication that we still have the goods and therefore are expected to produce them again.

Third, we appreciate the effort of the friend to divert us from our miseries and carry on with us as though things hadn't changed and we still had the capacity for enjoying life. In this we sense the friend's real interest in us and affection for us, than which there is no more effectual confidence builder.

Fourth, while we don't enjoy it at the moment, we nearly always realize later that a good scolding at the hands of a friend is sometimes a most salutary experience. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend."

Man or woman that's losing grip nine times out of ten becomes careless of personal appearance. In the case of a woman she's permanently defeated when she lets herself go and begins to look like an old hag. In the case of a business man, careless grooming; unshaven face, uncut hair, unpressed clothes and unshined shoes betray him as being on the skids. When he's unneat and untidy he's telling the world he's slipping and that's all the world needs to let him slip on down. A very close friend can give him a faithful wound on this score.

Summing up: When we are down, the friend can lift us up by sympathy and affection that warms us, by commendation that cheers us, by faith that inspires us, and by the scolding that stings us.

MY DAY: A Pleasant Holiday At the Beach

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

GOLDEN BEACH, Fla.—Here I am installed in a very comfortable house on Golden Beach, in Florida, and our holiday has already begun. The one engagement I had before arrival was with the press, and they all came and began to look like an old hag. So, almost before I had really looked over the house, the photographers had their field day, and the reporters asked all their questions. Now they are gone, and from now on nothing has to be done. I should qualify that a bit, for this column must be written, but if I didn't write it, I'd feel something was missing. Also, the mail must be attended to every day. So far as social engagements are concerned, or duties of any kind, they are wiped off my books during my stay here.

Spending a holiday is really a very nice feeling, but not having experienced it very often in my life, it makes me feel a bit guilty and I wonder if something won't happen which will necessitate my return to the unpleasant existence of doing things which have to be done. In any case, I am going to enjoy every day as we live it.

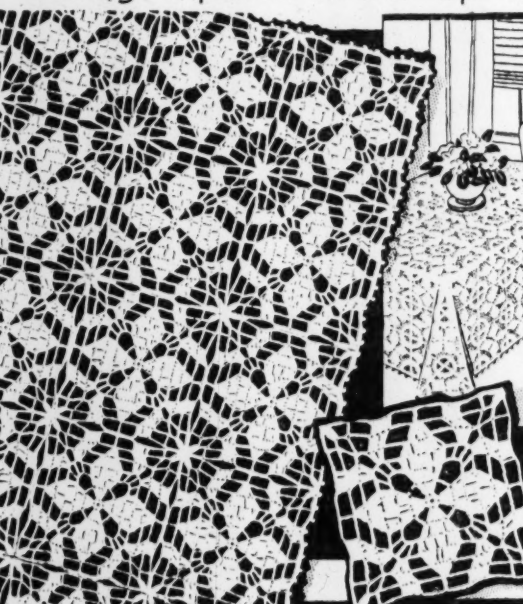

Yesterday afternoon, the exercises at the Bethune-Cookman College were a little disturbed by a heavy shower of rain and a great many people left their seats outside and stood inside the auditorium. It was a very nice surprise. They need a substantial fund, and the exercises at the college were a very nice surprise. They need a substantial fund, and the exercises at the college were a very nice surprise. They need a substantial fund, and the exercises at the college were a very nice surprise.

Until I went over the plant, I never realized what a really dramatic achievement this junior college is. It ministers to the needs of 100,000 Negroes from Daytona south, and it takes 250 students. The object is to train leaders who will return to their communities and serve their people in whatever line of activity they have chosen as a life work. Thirty-five years ago, Mrs. Bethune began with five little girls. The first land was bought with the first $5 earned. This land up to that time had been part of the city dump in a portion of the city known as "Hell's Hole."

Like all other colleges, they still need a great deal—a library building, for instance, and many more books. From this small library in Bethune-Cookman College, books are sent traveling around into the various rural districts of the vicinity. They need a substantial endowment fund, a building where better shop work can be done, for at present the quarters are too small. Somehow, I have a feeling that this work is going to grow and that Mrs. Bethune's dream is going to carry her people far along the way to better education and better standards of living.

Mrs. Aubrey Williams was with us for the day, and Mr. Clarence Pickett came to see me for a little while in the late afternoon. Both of them took the train north in the evening, and I confess that a quiet evening was very agreeable to me. We left Daytona about 9:30 this morning and motored down here, stopped to drink some delicious orange juice on the way and bought a swing made of cypress to send back to put beside the swimming pool at Hyde Park. I hope it will stand our weather and prove to be an addition to our outdoor furniture.

A Mild Facial Is Efficient Routine

By Lillian Mae.

Have you ever realized that your skin is not necessarily the age that the family Bible would prove you to be? Well, then what about the woman whose hair is silvery white—with age—but whose complexion is that of a girl in her teens? I've seen this and you have, too, undoubtedly.

Of course, that's an unusual case, but it does serve to prove the point that a skin does not always tell your age. So it's for such cases that I am bringing today, a mild skin treatment for the "young" skin of any age.

Naturally, the young person doesn't need a stringent beauty routine, though a skin that is exposed to undue weather conditions, etc., is improved by the proper attention. For a good complexion won't just stay that way without your help.

So, whether you are in late teens or early 20s with a normal skin, or are much older by the family Bible and have a young complexion, you'll need to heed my advice today.

This mild treatment is a new routine, but is efficient and delightful. And it's so simple to follow that it will prove very gratifying to the young girl or the woman with your skin, regardless of her age.

First, there's a mild cleansing cream. When it is removed with a tissue, there's not the slightest trace of oiliness apparent on the skin. But that does not take away the necessity of using a lotion. So in the lovely box of light blue lined with pink, there's also a generous-sized bottle of a mild skin lotion which leaves a delicate tingling as it removes cream from the pores and cools and freshens the skin. It may be used on even the most sensitive skin—on both face and neck.

Then there's the jar of mild skin cream for a final step in the facial, to smooth and lubricate. Applied with the fingertips it causes a soothing sensation while the skin becomes soft and smooth.

If you are young—or you have a young skin—if your skin is unduly sensitive, you should give this little box a chance to prove to you what it can really do for you. Phone me and I'll tell you the name of the package and where you may obtain it. The price for all three items is only $2.50. Write me if you do not live in Atlanta, but be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

In Three Quick Steps Make Slip Covers

A real spring beauty! That's what a pretty slip cover makes of your dingy chair or sofa—and easily you run one up.

The gay ruffled cover is of chintz in a "calico" pattern. Tiny flowers in many colors are sprinkled on a French blue ground—and seams are trimly bound in a flower color.

But, whatever fabric you choose, you make your slip cover the pin-on way in three simple steps.

1. Pin and cut. Smooth fabric over back and seat, leaving a four-inch tuck-in between them. Have fabric right side out for bound seams. Now pin along the lines of the upholstery and cut one one-half inches outside pins for seams. Similarly, pin and cut pieces for arms, sides, back, front.

2. Baste and try on. Remove the pinned cover, baste along the lines of the pins. The men fit snugly to get that custom-made look.

3. Stitch and finish. When making bound seams, trim the edges neatly, have the binding cover the stitches. The perkily gathered flounce you add last of all—and now you have a slip cover to grace any room!

Step-by-step directions and diagrams for the pin-on method are given in our 40-page booklet, "Make Slip Covers Successfully." Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, MAKING SLIP COVERS SUCCESSFULLY, to Home Institute, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Woman's Quiz

Q. How is hard cider made?

A. In order to become hard, cider must ferment just as grape juice ferments to make wine. When fermentation is complete, the hard cider must be sealed airtight to prevent it from turning to vinegar. Some farmers let the barrels of fermented cider freeze slightly and drain the hard cider from the bottom.

Q. How should a room be prepared to care for a person suffering from scurvy fever?

A. The patient should be placed in a quiet, sunny room from which carpets, draperies and unnecessary furniture has been moved. The bed should be raised by placing substantial wood blocks under it so that the needs of the patient may be attended to without stooping. Paper cups and napkins should be used and afterwards burned. All linen bedding, sleeping garments and articles of apparel should be first soaked in bichlorid solution and wrapped in a bichlorid soaked sheet before being sent to the laundry. Sweeping and dusting should be dispensed with entirely and cleaning should be done with cloths moistened with bichlorid solution. The attending physician will direct what strength solution to use or he may order some other disinfectant solution.

Anna Neagle's young skin proves your skin does not always tell your age and mild treatments keep your skin "young."

Stage Veteran Tells Secret For Staying Young, Healthy

By Ida Jean Kain.

There are those who whisper that Effie Shannon, whose beauty is a stage legend, must be around 70. . . . But, even when they check up, these age mongers are never very positive, because the known facts are that Miss Shannon has to make up to play the part of an old woman and that she gets far mail entreating her for the secret of a perfect throatline.

Now that I've seen Miss Shannon close up, I can tell you she is just as beautiful as they say she is, and that she looks much too young to be the age reported. She says: "I chose the age of 40 some time ago and I intend to stick to it until the wind blows me away!"

What does she think helps a woman to keep young? Well, a good, sturdy ancestry goes a long way! Miss Shannon likes to talk about her grandmother who at the age of 99 read without the aid of glasses, had her own teeth, and whose hair was very stubborn about turning gray.

Next, she thinks work is important. She believes that the women who have interesting work to do keep young much longer than the ones with too much leisure.

As for that throatline, she says the whole secret is posture.

"It isn't a question of having a long, swan neck," she declares, "but of holding yourself up!" A singer or an actress has to do that. Otherwise, her voice wouldn't reach the audience. I can think of nothing better to suggest for the average woman than a few singing lessons—whether she can sing or not. It is wonderful for the posture. Besides, it's fun!"

But what the average woman really needs to make her acutely posture conscious is a stage director who jacks her up when she moves or stands awkwardly. Once a stage director tells an actress about her posture she stays told!

Another important thing in this business of staying young is the ability to relax. "An actress learns to save herself for the performance. She can't afford to burn up energy in doing 'things that do not matter, or in worrying about something that can't be helped.' When Miss Shannon finds herself in a quandary, she takes her car out.

"You can't drive a car and think of anything else!" she claims. That might be a good tip for some of you chronic worriers! Nothing makes you look old faster than worry.

Miss Shannon has a very slender, youthful figure. Of course she exercises! She does here calisthenics to music because it's more enjoyable that way. In addition, she likes long walks in the country, and gardening, which is both exercise and relaxation.

Good posture makes for youthful appearance, so send for the leaflet, "Posture Makes the Figure." Send a stamped, return envelope with your request to Miss Kain, in care of The Atlanta Constitution.

Modified Princess Lines

By Barbara Bell.

We're proud of our designs for apron frocks and house dresses generally, and we'd like to do some enthusiastic attention-calling to this one, 1925-B, for large women. It is as fresh as a March breeze, decidedly new, yet just as comfortable and slenderizing as the type you've seen time and again. Cut on modified princess lines, with gathers over the bust, it fits beautifully and smoothly, and allows plenty of leeway for acting. That slanted closing line, too, does its bit in detracting from width and stressing height.

The dress has back-fastened belts, you see, to draw it in snugly, yet unconfinedly. And don't you like the oblique position of the gathered pocket? Send for this pattern right away—you'll make it up over and over again, iningham, broadcloth or percale.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1925-B is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 3 7-8 yards of 35-inch material, without nap; 2 1-2 yards trimming.

Send right this minute, for Barbara Bell's New Fashion Book! It's a brilliant pattern parade of the best spring styles, in designs that you can easily, thrifflily make at home! Everything you want—home frocks, dressy clothes, sports outfits, lingerie, adorable children's clothes.

Price of pattern 15 cents, book 15 cents.

A Meal in Itself— This Sunday Night Salad!

Star it on your buffet supper table—serve it when "the crowd" drops in. This dish is always a treat when made with tender, full-flavored Mueller's Elbow Macaroni.

BUFFET MACARONI SALAD
1 pkg. Mueller's Elbow Macaroni
1 cup cold cooked meat, diced (chicken, pork, veal or lamb)
Mayonnaise (seasoned with onion-juice, if desired)
1 cup celery, diced
1 cup American cheese, cubed
1 pimiento, cut in small pieces
Radishes
Salt and pepper to taste

Cook Mueller's Elbow Macaroni as directed. This takes only 9 minutes because tenderness is made into Mueller's—it doesn't have to be cooked in. Chill macaroni—then mix thoroughly with enough mayonnaise to moisten. Mix in meat, diced celery, cubed cheese and pimientos. Season to taste. Place in salad bowl and garnish with radish roses. Serves 6.

This salad may be made hours ahead of time and left in the refrigerator until needed. Mueller's never gets sticky or soggy while standing. Due to an exclusive "quick-dried" process, Mueller's cooks in half the time—boils up more in cooking. Mueller's delicate flavor blends perfectly with other ingredients—an excellent solution to the "leftovers" problem. Stock up with Mueller's Elbow Macaroni today!

Mother, Mix Your Own Cough Remedy. It's Fine.

Quick, Comforting Relief. Saves Money. Easily Mixed.
This well-known home-mixed medicine costs very little, but it gives delightful, swift-acting relief from coughs due to colds. It takes but a moment to prepare—it's so easy a child could do it. And it saves real money.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any drugstore. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you have a full pint of really splendid cough remedy and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, lasts a family a long time and children love its taste.

And for quick, blessed relief, you'll say it is truly wonderful. It has a remarkable action. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages.

Pinex is a compound containing Norway Pine and reliable guaicol, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Roosevelt Is Hope of World, Meriwether Editor Insists

Judge H. H. Revell, Long-Time Friend of President, Urges Third Term for Good of Nation and All Mankind, in Editorial.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. GREENVILLE, Ga., Feb. 20.—Expressing the belief that President Roosevelt "does not want a third term but would make the sacrifice for the good of his country," Judge H. H. Revell, sage of Meriwether county politics and weekly newspaper editor, declared in a recent editorial that "Roosevelt is still the hope of the nation and the world."

FIGHT FOR LOVE

Jennifer's Departure for Europe Depresses Milton. Star Suggests Trip

By SYLVIA TAYLOR.

SYNOPSIS. Star Bright is unhappy and diffident. Her slovenly mother, Mamie, divorces her when Star was a child, constantly talks of "better days," and her stepfather, Joe Belevan, is mysterious about his driving a truck at night. Mamie has insisted upon dancing lessons for Star, her imbecile being, as her child's name indicated, that Star should shine on the stage. Star makes no friends at high school as she cannot entertain anybody at home and when she graduates, she is relieved when her stenography teacher sends her to Nina Lambert, novelist, who wants a secretary to live with her. Nina's son, Bob, just out of college, falls in love with Star and when he plans an early marriage, Star feels disgraced by Mamie's conduct. Bob reassures her but she leaves secretly, fails to get a job, and is tempted to leap from a yacht harbor pier. Milton Wood, magazine business manager and a friend of Nina, stops her and gives her a job as typist, and she comes to realize him so that she is shocked when she learns he is married and then sees his beautiful wife, Jennifer, who is being courted by racketeers and Star must support Mamie. The next day Wood makes her his secretary and Mrs. Wood shows an intense dislike for her. That night, while out with boy friends from her boarding house, Star sees Jennifer with a smiling-looking man, who shows her his check and they leave. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT XX.

Three days later Mrs. Milton Wood sailed for Europe. There was a farewell party for her on the ship. Her photograph, gay and lovely, with her husband's orchids which Star had been asked to select, pinned on the evening papers. A last-minute interview stated that she expected to spend a month or so in Paris and London where Mr. Wood might join her later. There was no hint of any marital rift, but Star knew that her employer was deeply depressed by his wife's departure. He rang for his secretary but she found him staring at Jennifer's picture with such a look of baffled defeat on his face that she went back into her own office.

He was beaten and knew it. He must guess that there was some reason for these continual jaunts away from him. As Star sat at her desk waiting, he rang for her again.

"How many times do I have to send for you?" he asked impatiently.

"I'm sorry," she apologized. "I thought you didn't want to be disturbed."

Her voice was so sympathetic it soothed his irritation.

"I beg your pardon, Star. I shouldn't have spoken to you like that. I'm tired. Too much work and too many late hours can ruin anybody's disposition."

"You have been busy," she agreed, taking the chair across from him.

"It's been hectic," he sighed. "Dinner parties every night for weeks. But I'm cancelling all social engagements for awhile. There is a limit to everything."

"Why don't you take a little trip on your cruiser?" she suggested.

His face brightened.

"That's exactly what I'd like to do, but I'm afraid there's no chance. There's a lot of work to be done on that boat before I take her out again. But maybe I can do some of it next Sunday."

Star spoke cheerlessly but her heart was pounding.

"May I help you?"

She had expected him to refuse but instead he asked, "Sure you want to?"

"Yes. At least I can clean up the cupboards and put fresh paper in the drawers."

"I supposed you'd be spending Sunday with your boy friend," he surmised.

"I haven't any boy friend," she informed him. "Besides, even if I did, I'd rather help you."

He looked at her surprised and bit amused at her confession but her manner was without sentiment. Merely a statement of fact.

"I'm afraid it's my boat you're interested in," he said smiling. Star smiled too.

"Maybe it is. I adore that little boat."

He beamed as if she had paid him the highest compliment, then his face fell.

"My wife doesn't share your enthusiasm. She has never even seen it."

"Perhaps she is a poor sailor," Star said innocently.

His eyes met hers as if he knew she was trying to comfort him. For one instant he permitted her to see the bitterness he had been trying to conceal, then he said lightly, "Anyway, it's a date for Sunday. Yes?"

"It's a date," she repeated.

He suggested calling for her but Star refused, insisting that she would meet him at the yacht harbor. She wanted to stop first to see her mother.

Star found Mamie in the doll-dolls again. Mrs. Brady had asked Mamie to go out with her, but she didn't have anything to wear. If she could afford a new coat, but of course she couldn't out of what Star was giving her.

"It was too cool not to go out without a coat, etc."

Feeling more generous than usual with the prospect of her own day, Star promised to draw the necessary amount from her savings account. It would clean it out, she reflected. But it was true; Mamie did need a new coat.

"I can wear the dress I bought for Mrs. Lambert's dinner," Mamie reminded her.

How long ago that dinner seemed. Her engagement to Bob had never been real to her. Now she felt as if it had never happened.

"Number eleven is vacant again," Mamie confided. "He told Mrs. Brady he was going away. But if you ask me..."

Star said, "I'm sorry, mother, but I have to run. I promised to meet someone."

"That old sweater and skirt?" Mamie asked disapprovingly. "You certainly aren't dressed up."

"No," Star smiled, telling nothing. "Well, good-bye! Want me to go with you to buy the coat?"

"Mrs. Brady said she would be glad to help me if I could afford to buy one," Mamie answered. "You won't forget to bring the money tomorrow?"

"I won't forget," Star promised. She fairly ran down the stairs she was so glad to escape. After all, the remainder of her savings account was a small price to pay for freedom. And Mamie showed only too plainly that Mrs. Brady's companionship was preferable to her daughter's.

The day was fair and softly bright. The smell of turning leaves was already in the air but the sun was warm. Star's heart raced as she walked past the row of boats to the trim little craft which belonged to her employer.

There was the name printed in black letters on the front—Adventures. And Milton, in the same disreputable clothes he had worn the night he followed her, wielding a paint brush which he flourished recklessly in her direction.

"It's about time you're getting here!" he cried.

If she had doubted her welcome, his greeting would have reassured her.

The moment she walked upon the deck, complete release came to Star's troubled spirit. She recalled that first night, after he had stopped her on the pier, when he had told him secrets she had never confided to any one else.

The knowledge that Jennifer had never set foot on board gave Star a feeling of possession. The day and the boat were theirs. They would make the most of it. Live it as if there were never to be another.

The Adventures. What an appropriate name, Star thought, as she worked with Milton making the trim little cruiser shipshape again after it had lain idle for weeks. Star had remembered it only as a cozy haven, a haven indeed when Milton took her on board from the pier that evening and in his kindly manner coaxed her story from her.

Milton's depression, following his wife's departure on another of her many jaunts, had been only too apparent to Star. But now they worked together joyously.

Scrubbing and scouring with the smell of paint mingling with the warm fresh air. Color whipped into the girl's pale cheeks. Laughing and chasing the ghosts from Milton's eyes.

When she called him to a luncheon of bacon and eggs and canned pork and beans, he devoured it ravenously.

"Some feast," he approved. "Isn't it funny what a day in the open can do for you? This little baby has been worth the price I paid for her a hundred times over. She has come to my rescue more than once."

"Mine, too," she reminded him. "That's right. I haven't forgotten. You're not sorry I ran after you that night?"

Her blue eyes met his shyly. "No, are you?"

He shook his head. "I'm beginning to wonder how I ever got along without you," he admitted, but there was no emotion in the words. "Okay, mate, how about getting back to work? We can't do anything after dark, you know."

Star washed the dishes and rearranged the freshly papered cupboard. She worked alone but she was not lonely hearing him whistle and sing on deck. Knowing he was happy was satisfaction enough. She could not have asked for more in one week. Intuitively she felt that by sharing his Sundays on the boat, she would become closer to him than she could in weeks of ordinary office work.

And when he left her at the boarding house, he said, "Thank you, Star. You've been a real pal." Which made her oblivious of the sight of Clifford Payne and Bruce Donovan, her two "musketees," leaving arm in arm with two girls.

The days following Jennifer's sailing for Europe flew by like a dream for Star. No longer harassed by the fear of Jennifer's appearance, Star was free to concentrate on her work. Mamie was her only worry and the congenial Mrs. Brady seemed willing and capable of amusing her mother better than Star could have done.

Star had no money for herself and no new clothes, but what did that matter when each day brought her the opportunity to be near the man she loved? She gave her services with quiet devotion and complete understanding. There was no sentiment in their relationship but, free from his wife's disturbing influence, Milton Wood's nerves relaxed. Star saved him from annoyance at every possible point. Surrounded him with an atmosphere of cheerful co-operation. Was always soft-spoken and attentive, never contradicting or intruding her own personality.

At the end of the second week Milton suggested that they spend another Sunday on his boat, adding, "I think we'll be able to take her out by the next week end."

He assumed that Star would want to go. Took her company for granted. And when the time arrived they spent an unforgettable day cruising on wind-swept sunny waters. Laughing at nothing, silent without constraint, or discussing his work. Until on the trip back he admitted, "You know, I've heard nothing from my wife since she left."

"I thought she might have sent you a cable," Star replied.

British Lion Roars at Sea

UNDER WAY Accompanied by destroyers and with cruisers patrolling the outer edges, the convoy moves off. Both these convoy pictures were made far enough away to pass the British censor rule that no ship names be revealed. The convoy system faces its biggest test now, for German warplanes attacked Allied shipping yesterday—answering the Altmark incident. (Story on Page 4)

CONVOY READY! The Allied convoy system, backbone of the British supply lines, is shown in action here. A destroyer, left, awaits the arrival of its flock. WHY, ARTURO! Hard-hitting Arturo Godoy, Chilean boxer who had Joe Louis doing a bit of fancy stepping for 15 rounds, arrived in Burbank, Cal., yesterday to do a dance turn in a movie theater. Two cuties of the chorus took him in tow. The fisticuff man didn't seem to mind.

BYRD VISITS Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, center, headed a visiting party from his Antarctic expedition landing at Rapa island in the south Pacific. The island is in the Austral group. With Byrd are Viscount Rene des Champs de Verniex, left, and Captain Isak Lystad, right. It's a good "shot" of the famous naval officer, whose explorations in the polar regions have won him decorations.

FLASH! A 16-inch coast defense gun blasts away somewhere in Hawaii during the recent warmup by Uncle Sam's land and sea forces for the annual war games in the Pacific in April.

INFORMAL Senator Robert A. Taft, left, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, chatted in Washington yesterday with Vice President Garner when they met at a luncheon.
